ROADS MAYHEM: PAY UP, SARKOZY

President urged to honour compensation claims

By PHIL REILLY

phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

KENT County Council leader Paul Carter is going head to head with French president Nicolas Sarkozy to demand that he pay up over the traffic chaos caused by the SeaFrance ferry strike.

Cllr Carter has demanded reassurances from Monsieur Sarkozy that he will honour millions of pounds worth of compensation claims by British businesses affected by the industrial action.

The demands came as a Tory MEP called on M Sarkozy to intervene directly to stop the SeaFrance officers' strike, which showed no sign of ending as Kent on Sunday went to press.

The strike, which started on February 27, caused the cancellation of SeaFrance services from Dover and sparked a backlog of lorries queuing to get to the port.

The action has crippled much of the county's transport system, causing serious disruption to businesses and residents across Kent.

But the British Government said Foreign Secretary David Miliband would not be getting involved because it was "a matter for the unions and SeaFrance".

Operation Stack, in which lorries are

GRIDLOCK: Traffic has been at a standstill as lorries queue on the coastbound M20 queued on coastbound stretches of the M20, has been in effect since shortly after the strike was announced.

Cllr Carter claimed the strike has cost millions of pounds to Kent and the wider UK economy, as well as widespread inconvenience to the county's motorists.

He has written a letter to M Sarkozy, in which he said he wanted to bring to his attention "gridlock on our motorway links, severe damage to our business economy and unacceptable inconvenience for residents".

It read: "The disruption caused by industrial action is bringing chaos not only to our roads and the lives of our residents but is seriously damaging Kent's economy, and we believe, the livelihoods of French and British haulage businesses."

He quoted the Kent-based UK Freight Transport Association's argument that making compensation claims in France is notoriously complicated and rarely results in any claims being successful.

Cllr Carter's letter added: "I seek your reassurance that compensation claims submitted to your government by UK businesses, that are collectively losing millions, will be honoured."

"I would appreciate your firm commitment to a resolution to the compensation issues and a long-term solution to the industrial action which is damaging both our economies."

A spokesman at the Elysee Palace said it did not wish to make any comment until the letter had been received.

M Sarkozy – who has been criticised for his showy private life – was elected last year on a reforming agenda in which he promised to clamp down on the power of trade unions.

His proposals include maintaining a minimum level of service on public transport during industrial disputes.

Richard Ashworth, Conservative MEP for the South East, said France is facing a "moment of truth" similar to Britain in the 1980s.

He told Kent on Sunday: "While I welcome the French President's resolve to reform France's uncompetitive employment practices, he must not stand by while industrial action obstructs European trade links."

put their questions to the Prime Minister

LAST week, we printed the first batch of answers given by Gordon Brown to questions sent to him by our readers.

We first invited our readers to send in their questions for the Prime Minister on February 3.

We were inundated questions by email, fax and post. Here are the remaining answers Mr Brown gave to KoS readers' questions...

QUESTION: Rob Ryan, 26, of Folkestone, asked: As a nation, we have an obligation to tackle our fair share of greenhouse gas emissions and their effect on climate change, including those from aviation.

As the Stern report highlighted, the associated climate change costs of emissions at a 'business as usual' level will be more detrimental to the economy in the long-term than the costs of abating climate change now. Therefore, why can we not follow France's lead and freeze all current plans for airport expansion?

GB REPLIED: I agree with you that we have a moral obligation to tackle climate change.

We are on course to reduce our emissions more than most other European countries, we have signed up to a massive expansion of wind and other renewable energy sources – by 2020 I hope we can get 20 per cent of all our energy from these sources.

We will only support airport expansion if strict environmental and noise conditions are met. But it is a fact that there has not been a major runway built in the South East since an extension at Gatwick in the 1950s.

Our competitors in Europe are growing their airports, so if we did not expand our own, it would not reduce the level of overall air travel and the resulting carbon emissions, it would simply mean air traffic being displaced to other European hubs.

QUESTION: Dr Ian R Holton, 52, of Tunbridge Wells, asked: Will those of us who refuse to be fingerprinted in the Government's ID scheme find that we can no longer get access to state services such as driving licences?

GB REPLIED: The National Identity Scheme is about making life easier and more secure, not making life harder. It builds on what is already happening with passports and immigration documents.

Like many countries around the world, we will be putting fingerprints into passports in the coming years and it will then be necessary for fingerprints to be recorded when applying for a passport.

On ID cards, the first step is making it compulsory for all foreign nationals in this country to carry an ID card and I hope most people would agree that is sensible.

We will then move forward with the voluntary ID card scheme for British citizens and I believe many people will welcome carrying one to make it easier to confirm their identity when for example accessing public services.

We can only move towards a compulsory ID cards system for all British citizens if there is a new Act of Parliament, so there will be plenty of time to debate the pros and cons of that next step in due course.

QUESTION: Ralph Austin, 61, of Maidstone, asked: Will the Prime Minister address the disadvantage caused by him when Chancellor to low-income earners and pensioners, where incomes are marginally over current tax and pension credit levels?

His lowering of the income tax rate to 20 per cent and the abolition of the 10 per cent rate was announced in 2007 and, from April 2008, perversely raises the income tax payable by the less well-off by between £100-200 per annum.

Hardly fair, and it will cost him support when he most needs it.

GB REPLIED: I think what we did in the 2007 Budget was an important reform to simplify the tax system, while boosting the incomes of hard-working families. We were also able to reduce the number of pensioners paying income tax by 600,000, so by April next year, 57 per cent of pensioners will be paying no income tax at all.

If you look at all the measures we've introduced on tax and benefits since 1997, I think you'll agree that we have succeeded in targeting most support at the households who need it most.

By next year, the average household will be £1,150 a year better off as a result of all our measures, but the average family with children will be £1,800 a year better off, and families with children in the poorest fifth of households will be £4,000 a year better off.

QUESTION: Alan Wanstall, 78, of Faversham, asked: Why is there such a chronic lack of prison accommodation?

GB REPLIED: Since 1997, we have increased prison capacity by more than 20,000 places – the biggest expansion in prison building in recent history, and in the last two years alone we've provided an extra 3,100 places.

Our programme for the coming years provides resources for an extra 20,000 places, and we are actively examining all ways of increasing capacity further, including the possibility of taking prison ships from The Netherlands.

Protecting the public is my first priority, and we will always ensure there are places for serious, dangerous and persistent offenders who ought to be in prison.

I am committed to maintaining indeterminate sentences which allow prisoners to be held until they are no longer a danger to the public, and as we have seen in the case of Steve Wright and Levi Bellfield, the worst offenders receive 'whole life' tariffs, so that they will spend the rest of their lives in jail without the possibility of parole.

As well as expanding our prison capacity for the future, we are looking at how we can better manage the prison population, reduce rates of re-offending and ensure non-custodial sentences such as community service are more effective.

QUESTION: Phil Granger, 62, of West Malling, asked: Prime Minister, how is it you can give almost £1 billion of our money to China and India, spend billions more on futile and unpopular wars and waste further billions on other lost causes, when our own people are dying due to being refused drugs for cancer, Alzheimer's, etc, our pensioners survive each week on less than some MPs pay for a restaurant meal and are then grossly insulted with a 25p rise on reaching 80, and you are still looking for yet more taxes to fill a budget shortfall?

GB REPLIED: There are a number of points here, but I think the most important is what we are doing to support sick and elderly people.

Since 1997, we have almost trebled the health budget, with around 80,000 more nurses and 35,000 more doctors.

Virtually nobody has to wait more than six months for in-patient treatment with the average wait just over five weeks, cataract operations have nearly doubled, heart operations have more than doubled, 99.9 per cent of people with suspected cancer are seen within two weeks of being referred, and cancer deaths among under-75s have been reduced by around 17 per cent, saving more than 60,000 lives.

But preventing ill health is just as important as treating people when they are ill, so we are investing more in order to extend entitlements for breast and bowel cancer screening and increase by three million the number of patients screened for cancer in total.

We are going to offer all men at 65 a check-up against anyeurisms and we will dramatically extend the offers of check-ups for a range of conditions, from heart disease to diabetes or strokes.

And we will become one of the first countries in the world to offer a vaccine against cervical cancer to all teenage girls.

The pension credits, winter fuel payments and other measures we've announced have lifted millions of pensioners out of poverty and left every pensioner household better off.

But I recognise there is more to do, including restoring the link between the basic state pension and earnings, which we will do in the next Parliament.

Hollywood film gets trashed by historian

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

HISTORIAN David Starkey has panned a Hollywood film about the love life of Henry VIII, saying it is nothing more than a "romp".

Dr Starkey, who lives near Canterbury, said The Other Boleyn Girl was "absolutely glorious trash".

The author of Monarchy: From the Middle Ages to Modernity said the film, much of which was shot in Kent, bore little relation to historical fact.

"Apart from the lovely costumes, it has got almost nothing to do with Tudor England," said Dr Starkey.

"Any notion that it has got anything to do with historical fact at all is very remote. It is typical of an American film fudging British history.

"I don't have a huge problem with that – the problems start when people imagine that because it's on film, it must be true and real. In this one, from as far as I can tell, they have even got the ages of the sisters the wrong way round."

"This film is a romp – no more, no less."

Based on the best-selling novel by Philippa Gregory, the movie stars Natalie Portman as Anne Boleyn, Scarlett Johansson as her sister Mary and Eric Bana as Henry VIII.

Released in cinemas on Friday, it was shot in Kent at Dover Castle, Penshurst Place and Knole House – but not the Boleyns' family home, Hever Castle.

Although he admitted not much of Hever's Tudor interior remains, Dr Starkey said: "What Hever does have is precisely what the film doesn't have."

"It has the real portraits and real illuminations and the atmosphere of those rooms is absolutely stunning. But then Hollywood is not interested in that, it is just interested in a pretty view."

Dr Starkey was at Hever Castle this week to unveil a newly acquired portrait of Catherine Howard – completing Hever Castle's collection of Henry VIII's Queens.

PORTRAIT: Catherine Howard and Dr Starkey

He said: "This is the prime portrait of Catherine Howard, but it's one that shows her almost certainly as a young woman just before she marries Henry."

"This is what she looked like when she was capturing Henry's eye."

Catherine Howard (1521-1542), Henry VIII's fifth wife, married the king in 1540 almost immediately after his divorce from Anne of Cleves was finalised. However, after humiliating the King with her infidelity, she was charged with treason and executed on February 13, 1542.

A new website dedicated to the Kent film locations used in The Other Boleyn Girl was launched on Thursday. The site – www.visit-TheOtherBoleynGirl.co.uk – has been designed to appeal to 'set-jetting tourists' – those who enjoy visiting film sets.

Starfish massacre

Picture TONY FLASHMAN

SEASIDE residents from Deal to Sandwich Bay got a surprise this week when thousands of dead starfish mysteriously washed up along the shore.

The sea creatures appeared on Wednesday afternoon, but the exact cause of the phenomenon is unknown.

Ian Humphreys, an Environment Agency ecologist from Thanet, said it was likely the starfish died because they ran out of mussels to eat.

He said: "Starfish are boom and bust organisms. They eat themselves out of house and home every year. If something happened to that food supply then they can die in large numbers, or they come into shallower waters where they are more susceptible to the cold."

Conservative shadow immigration spokesman Damian Green said he was hopeful that Mr Sarkozy would be successful in his reforms.

He said: "Sarkozy is on the right side of this argument. I don't blame him for this."

"I think what is going on is a last desperate piece of flexing of muscles by unions."

"It feels like this country in the 1980s when union powers were reduced."

SeaFrance's managing director Robin Wilkins told Kent on Sunday the strike was not likely to be resolved this weekend.

A spokesman for the Foreign Office said: "The situation is regrettable, but at the moment the matter is for the unions and for SeaFrance."

"It's difficult for the Foreign Office to become involved in disputes involving a single company."

"The ports are still open on the British and French side."

"The situation isn't as bad in France as it is in Kent and tourist traffic isn't being affected."

Michael Fuller, the chief constable of Kent Police, expressed his frustration on Thursday and said it was costing his force £15,000 and 90 officers a day to manage.

PRESSURE: Nicolas Sarkozy

He said: "Stack is likely to be in place well into next week."

SeaFrance officers are demanding a five per cent wage increase and improved conditions.

KCC has made £350,000 available and is working with the Highways Agency to make reduce the impact of Operation Stack next week.

Get set for the Kent Travel and Leisure Show

HUNDREDS of people are expected to flock to the first Kent Travel and Leisure show next Sunday.

The show, organised by KOS Media and supported by Visit Kent, showcases the many tourist attractions across the county, from theme parks to country homes and castles.

Exhibition stands will cover the different means of transport from Kent, including holidays and city breaks from Kent International Airport, cruises from Dover, and short breaks to France by rail and sea.

Fran Warrington, head of tourism for Kent County Council, said: "This is an important event for the county's leisure, hospitality and tourism businesses."

So much to offer

"Kent has a fine reputation as a visitor destination. We are building on that reputation and taking every step to grow our tourism businesses for a sustainable future."

"With its stunning coastline, Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty and internationally renowned castles, gardens, cathedrals and historic houses, Kent has so much to offer visitors of all ages from home and abroad – for a day trip, a short break or a longer holiday."

Around 90 companies will be represented at the show at Dover cruise terminal and there will be a variety of presentations throughout the day. Face painting, balloon modelling and a magician will entertain children.

Admission is free and the show is open from 10am until 4pm.

Euro vote was broken promise, claims Ukip

THE MPs who voted against a referendum on the controversial Lisbon Treaty have "welshed on their promises" to constituents, according to the leader of the UK Independence Party.

Nigel Farage's comments came after a majority of Kent MPs lost a crucial referendum vote this week, as the county's representatives toed their party lines.

A proposal by the Conservatives to hold a referendum on the controversial Lisbon Treaty, which replaced the previous European Constitution, was defeated in the House of Commons on Wednesday night.

Kent's nine Labour MPs – John Austin, Paul Clark, Clive Efford, Stephen Ladyman, Bob Marshall-Andrews, Gwyn Prosser, Jonathan Shaw, Howard Stoate and Derek Wyatt – all voted to approve the treaty without a referendum.

The county's 14 Conservatives – Julian Brazier, Greg Clark, David Evennett, Michael Fallon, Roger Gale, Damian Green, Adam Holloway, John Horam, Michael Howard, Jacqui Lait, Robert Neill, Hugh Robertson, John Stanley and Ann Widdecombe – all voted for a referendum. Former Tory Derek Conway also voted in favour of a referendum.

The treaty will now be ratified without any referendum, unless the House of Lords forces the bill back to the Commons.

The vote was seen as a blunder for the Lib Dems, when close to a fifth of its MPs defied the leadership to vote for a referendum.

Majority of teen psychosis caused by use of cannabis

By JENNA PUDELEK

jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

AS many as 60 per cent of young people in east Kent suffering from their first episode of psychosis, smoke or have a history of smoking cannabis.

The new figures, provided by the NHS, reveal that of mental health patients aged 14 to 35, half had taken or were taking the drug. For younger service users, aged 14 to 25, the rate is 63 per cent.

Karen White, medical director of Kent and Medway NHS and Social Care Partnership Trust, said: "That gives you an idea of the relationship between its use and psychosis."

Dangers

"The youngest group that have psychosis are or have been cannabis users and they are not very old so it is in the recent past.

"I haven't got exact numbers [for west Kent] but it is safe to say it is the same."

A national charity that helps people with the most severe mental illnesses, Rethink, has launched a campaign urging the Government to spend more money raising awareness about the psychological dangers of cannabis among children.

It aims to highlight the dangers of the drug

SKUNK: Medics say research proves a link between mental illness and cannabis use including the fact that cannabis smokers under the age of 15 are four times more likely to experience psychosis.

Dr White said the trust, which is responsible for mental health services in the county, supported the campaign.

She said the damage cannabis can do to people's mental health and its link to psychosis is backed up by good research.

Asked about so-called 'super skunk', she said: "When the biochemists analyse the cannabis of today it seems about 18 times stronger than in the 60s and 70s. Certainly the number of young people presenting with psychotic illnesses who have been or are now smoking cannabis is enormous."

The charity believes the Government is wasting time reclassifying cannabis and should instead be warning people about the dangers.

"We've got to educate and give young people the facts, in a way that they will listen, so they can weigh up the risks," said Dr White.

She said the early intervention teams across the county were doing outreach work in schools, teaching young people about how common it is to develop psychosis and what the warning signs are.

But Dr White said there was more that could be done and that educating young people needed to be "broadened out" and include, for example, the criminal justice services.

The teams face a hard job when according to Rethink one in four people think cannabis is better for you than coffee.

This year the Government is due to announce the results of a review into the reclassification of the drug.

The charity said: "Changing the classification won't stop people using cannabis. Our survey found only three per cent of people who had quit cannabis gave illegality as a reason for quitting."

"Jailing people will not solve the problem. The money spent on re-classifying cannabis again should be spent on health education, services for cannabis addiction and further research into the links with mental illness."

Dr White, who previously worked as a consultant psychiatrist, said reclassification gave out the wrong message.

She said that some research suggests that people who smoke cannabis are five times more likely to develop anxiety and depression, which suggests long-term damage.

One in 10 people of any age will have an experience such as developing hallucinations and paranoid ideas - cannabis can have an adverse effect at any age, she said.

That old story of sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll

AMY Winehouse's battle with drink and drugs has been widely chronicled in the tabloids.

Despite this, her career seems to be at an all-time high, with her winning five Grammy awards last month alone. Her acknowledged drug habit has seen her questioned by police but never charged.

Pete Doherty and Britney Spears have hit the headlines for similar misgivings, but still it appears no proper action is taken against them. What message is this sending out to young fans?

As a mother of two teenagers, it was a relief to read this week that the UN Narcotics Control Board is calling for tougher action, saying that authorities are dealing too leniently with celebrities.

By JULIE MADDOCKS

Yourkenttv presenter

Board member of the UN drugs watchdog, Hamid Ghodse, said: "Young people are quick to pick up on, and react to, perceived leniency. It also makes people become cynical about drug enforcement."

And so began the dinner table discussion with my children.

Both agreed that drugs were a bad idea, and felt strongly against the so-called role models getting away with it.

Matt, 16, said that they should be made an example of, to show that their behaviour wasn't acceptable, and that stars like Britney Spears were telling young kids that "it's no big deal".

Mike, 14, said: "It's not fair, it's just as bad as anyone else doing it, if not worse. They are just the same as all of us, why should they be let off?"

Although, interestingly, both were adamant that cannabis should be legalised and that alcohol was in their minds a far more addictive drug. A debate for another day I think.

Which made me question, whether I would have had such a conversation with my parents 30 years ago? The answer is a definite no, despite the fact that when I was growing up the Rolling Stones were living a similar lifestyle, and appeared to be dealt with just as leniently.

Oh, how things have changed!

PATIENTS and visitors have been urged to challenge doctors, nurses and other healthcare professionals if they think they have failed to wash their hands.

As part of KOS Media's campaign to promote hand hygiene in hospitals, healthcare centres and at home and work, this week the award-winning publisher is asking: "Have you washed your hands?"

James Nash, a consultant microbiologist and director of infection control and prevention at East Kent Hospitals Trust, was asked if people should feel confident enough to challenge NHS workers about hand hygiene.

"Definitely, they should do," he said. "We encourage patients to challenge staff. We've improved but I don't think we're good enough yet."

"Hand washing is something that members of the public have a right to expect."

"Some hospitals have been experimenting with a red card system, where a red card is given to a consultant if they come in without washing their hands."

Infection

Sara Mumford, director of infection control and prevention and lead microbiologist at Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells NHS Trust, agreed with Dr Nash.

She said: "Absolutely – and I think we should be challenging visitors as well."

"It works both ways. If we are asking visitors to clean their hands when they come in if they see something they think is wrong, they should tell someone in the department so it can be put right there and then."

Using the alcohol provided around hospitals and washing your hands regularly with liquid soap and water is one of the easiest and best ways to help the fight against healthcare-acquired infections, such as MRSA and Clostridium difficile.

Dr Mumford was headhunted to work at the west Kent trust in the wake of the damning Healthcare Commission report into two outbreaks of C diff at Maidstone, Kent and Sussex and Pembury hospitals.

So, have you washed your hands?

By JENNA PUDELEK

jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

NORMAN Williams, who lives in Broadstairs, contacted KOS Media after reading about the hand hygiene campaign.

The 75-year-old was admitted to Kent and Canterbury Hospital at the end of last year.

"I must say at the outset that my treatment and the whole of the staff were both of great help to me and I was discharged after a week feeling a lot better."

"However, I noticed that although alcohol hand washers were in all departments, I very rarely saw any of the staff using them to any great extent," Mr Williams said.

He also raised concerns that nurses, kitchen staff and cleaners were leaving the hospital in their uniforms and coming back in afterwards wearing the same clothes.

"Last week, I attended a private hospital for a blood test and I was talking about this problem to a nurse. She told me that she had been employed in the private sector for 22 years and in all that time had never worn her uniform to or from work."

"She said if she was seen doing this she would be dismissed instantly. Surely if this applies to the private sector it could be enforced in the NHS?"

A spokeswoman for East Kent Hospitals Trust said that a new policy was planned, stating that staff must not wear their uniforms home and would have to pick them up from the laundry at the beginning of each shift.

She was unable to confirm when it would be introduced.

At least 90 patients died from the superbug during the outbreaks and the watchdog's report was highly critical of management, infection control and hygiene at the trust.

The trust has now reduced C diff cases by 40 per cent and developed a new system of caring for patients with the diarrhoea bug that is going to be used by the Department of Health's C diff Improvement Team as example of best practice.

By the end of March the trust is on target to have cut MRSA cases by 50 per cent.

In her previous role as a consultant in communicable diseases at the Health Protection Agency in Kent, Dr Mumford visited the trust during its second outbreak in 2006.

She said: "Infection control did not have the high profile it has now. When the outbreak first began the infection control team was very understaffed."

"It was not caught early enough and it got out of control before anyone recognised the size of the problem."

"Now, we've put in a huge number of strategies to address the problem."

The trust has invested £1 million in cleaning – with extra staff providing cleaning 24 hours a day and hourly toilet cleaning if there is an outbreak of, for example, Norovirus, she said.

Commodities are cleaned after every use, she said, after the Healthcare Commission reported that there was a shortage of nurses to clean and empty commodes.

Bacteria

"We also restructured antibiotic regulating so that we avoid using broad spectrum antibiotics," she said. "We target antibiotics to a very narrow spectrum that deal with specific bacteria."

Alcogel is available at the entrance to the trust's hospitals, at the entries to wards and at the end of beds, and everyone is encouraged to wash their hands regularly, Dr Mumford said.

An isolation ward for C diff patients is opening at the Kent and Sussex by the end of the month. The Cornwallis isolation ward opened at Maidstone Hospital at the end of November.

Dr Mumford said the nurses had become specialists in dealing with the infection.

A Conservative peer sparked outrage last week after labelling nurses "grubby" during a debate in the House of Lords.

Speaking about his experience at the Royal United Hospital in Bath, Lord Mancroft said: "The nurses who looked after me were mostly grubby – we are talking about dirty fingernails and hair – and were slipshod and lazy."

The Royal College of Nurses said his comments were "grossly unfair" and David Cameron called for him to be reprimanded.

Industrial estate stranded on the road to nowhere

AN INDUSTRIAL park that was due to be completed in 2005 is lying empty, with the county council and regional development agency at odds over who is responsible.

Betteshanger Park, built during the £5milion revamp of the former site of Betteshanger Colliery near Deal, should have been open last year but is lying dormant because the main access road has not yet been approved by Kent County Council.

A spokesman for South East England Development Agency (Seeda), which owns the site, said the road has been completed and is waiting for KCC to formally adopt it.

However, Cllr Keith Ferrin, KCC's cabinet member for environment, highways and waste, said the council was still waiting for outstanding work to be completed.

He insisted there was no row between the two bodies, but said issues relating to a wildlife tunnel and two bridges over streams were still to be resolved.

The issue has angered many Deal residents because a planning application for a builders' merchant has been given provisional planning permission in the town.

Many residents believe access to the site, at Minters Yard, is unsuitable and argue the Betteshanger site should be used instead.

Julie Thomsett, from Southwall Road, said: "If there is no conflict between KCC and Seeda then why are they waiting for each other?"

"It has all been paid for taxpayers' money. There has been three years of lost revenue."

"Between 8-9am there will be 117 various movements of traffic from small vans to HGVs delivering bricks to a builders' merchant. That is the time children go to school. All the roads in this part of Deal are small and narrow."

The Minters Yard site was provisionally approved by Dover District Council last month pending minor changes to the application. A new application is expected to be submitted shortly.

Cllr Ferrin insisted the two sites were in no way connected.

He said: "It is perceived by some that this [Betteshanger] development is in some way linked with that at Minters Yard in Deal. This is not the case, the development at Minters Yard is subject to two separate planning applications."

"Both Betteshanger and Minters Yard sites are separately identified and allocated as employment land in the Dover District Local Plan 2002."

New canons appointed

THE Archbishop of Canterbury installed six new honorary canons in services at Canterbury Cathedral.

Dr Williams was joined by the Dean of Canterbury, Robert Willis, for two services on Saturday and Sunday.

In the first service, Sheila McLachlan, Colin Preece and Lindsay Hammond were installed, with Kerry Thorpe, David Roper and Julian Hills the next day. All now have the title Reverend Canon.

They are all now members of the College of Canons and will elect a new Archbishop when the post is vacant.

The office dates back to 1840 and there can be a maximum of 30 honorary canons at any time.

James to the rescue

A BRAVE six year old is being honoured by firefighters for his quick actions spotting a fire.

James Samuelson, of Highfield Close, in Canterbury, was playing in the front garden when he spotted smoke coming from one of his neighbour's home.

He rushed to tell his father, Hugh, who dialled 999.

Mr Samuelson said he was proud of his son's quick thinking last December.

He said: "There was a lot of smoke coming from the house but the owners hadn't been alerted and said all they had heard was some crackling in the chimney."

James will be awarded a certificate of congratulations next Wednesday at Canterbury fire station.

The bottom-up view of modern England

By PHIL REILLY

phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

AWARD-winning novelist Marina Lewycka was inspired to write her latest book while gazing at Kentish strawberry fields from the window of a train.

For the author, who won Bollinger Everyman Prize for Comic Fiction and the Saga Award for Wit in 2005 for her novel A Short History of Tractors in Ukrainian, it reminded her of a time spent picking strawberries in Kent.

Ms Lewycka, 62, is launching the paperback version of her new novel, Two Caravans, at Waterstone's in Tunbridge Wells on Wednesday.

It tells the story of a group of young immigrants from Eastern Europe who come to the county to pick strawberries and find themselves living in two caravans in a Kentish field.

The author, who was raised by her Ukrainian immigrant parents in Sheffield after World War Two, told KOS Media she came to the county one summer as a student to pick strawberries.

She said: "I came down about 35 years ago with a family from the East End of London in the days when lots of people from the East End would come to pick fruit in the summer. "We worked very hard, but we also drank a lot of cider and I was drunk all the time. Working in the sun with a lot of cider inside me was not very comfortable."

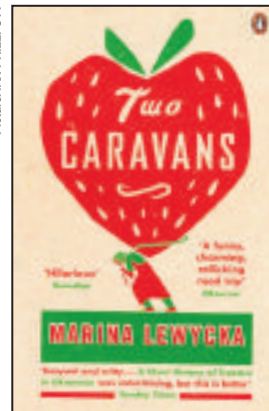

"I was going through Kent a few years ago on the train and saw the image of a strawberry field with two caravans. It sparked the whole story."

Two Caravans is dedicated to the Morecambe Bay cockle pickers who were killed by rising tides in 2004.

Ms Lewycka said she wanted to portray not

Picture: JAN PHILLIPS

TRIP: Marina Lewycka was moved to write Two Caravans after trip through Kent's fields only the exploitation of the immigrant workers in the novel, but also their wide-eyed optimism and the beauty of their surroundings.

She said: "I thought I was the right person to tell this story. My parents were immigrants from Eastern Europe 60 years ago. They came to the UK from the labour camps of Germany."

"My father did agricultural work and my mum cleaned houses. As a child I remembered it was a blissful, happy time. People are worked hard and exploited, but they don't do it in order to be miserable, they want to enjoy themselves."

"It irritates me that all we get [about immigrants] is statistics, statistics, statistics. There are issues and problems about migration and immigration, but we have to look around in Kent to see how much the boom in the British economy is down to these people."

The characters in the book end up escaping from their employers in their two caravans, at one point seeking sanctuary by driving them onto the grounds of Canterbury Cathedral.

Ms Lewycka said one of her intentions was to give a "bottom-up view of modern England".

She added: "You notice different things when you are a new arrival."

"I think the thing that really comes across at the beginning, as a migrant and especially for [lead character] Irina, is the longing to meet English people to practice the language."

"She hardly meets any English people, all the other people she meets are migrants and that is very much the migrant experience."

Ms Lewycka will also be at Waterstone's in Canterbury on May 14. The day before, winners of the Penguin readers' group competition will be able to meet the author for a drink.

Green boffins win Shell award

TWO scientists from the University of Greenwich at Medway have been named as top climate change entrepreneurs.

Carbon8 Systems Ltd, run by Dr Paula Carey and Dr Colin Hills, was awarded the Shell Springboard Award.

The prize rewards the best small business ideas for tackling climate change.

The pair developed the 'Accelerated Carbonation' method, which captures harmful gases from landfills and turns them into limestone or carbonates.

Dr Carey, a lecturer with the university's school of science, said: "Winning this award has already opened doors for us. We've confirmed a partnership with Kent County Council to create a pilot project on a local landfill site."

Pedestrians to be stopped for breath testing

POLICE breath testing for pedestrians is on the cards for Kent after a major groundbreaking seminar – the first of its kind in the UK – between people selling alcohol and the authorities in Medway, writes Tony Patey.

The idea was just one of many to come out of the high-powered meeting on Tuesday which attracted 200 delegates from local pubs, restaurants, nightclubs, off-licences, supermarkets, councillors and senior police officers.

Chief Inspector Des Keers, who co-ordinated the event, aims to get together a fact-finding group of interested people to go to Rotterdam in Holland to see the idea in action and then try and set up at least a pilot scheme in Medway or across Kent.

He told KOS Media: "We have seen a significant reduction in alcohol-related violence in Medway – around 20 per cent – over the last two years because of partnership working, but we want to keep ahead of the game."

Delegates included Inspector Peter Raggars from Holland where a national ID scheme is already in action.

Any youngsters aged 16 to 18 found over a certain limit are either taken home to parents (who could be fined) or refused entry into a town centre or other venue.

Chief Insp Keers said the idea could counter the growing issue of 'pre-fuelling', where people drink heavily at home before going out at night and the availability of cheap alcohol from supermarkets, 24-hour garages and off-licences.

24-hour drink laws 'damage our society'

By PHIL REILLY

phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

ROUND-the-clock drinking laws have "damaged the fabric of our society", according to a senior Kent politician.

Graham Gibbens, cabinet member for public health at the county council, claimed the 24-hour licensing laws introduced in November 2005 had led to more alcohol consumption.

He claimed this has exacerbated the problems of underage and binge drinking and anti-social behaviour, particularly in town centres late at night.

He said: "I can see little benefit coming out of 24-hour drinking. I have not seen that the fabric of our society has been improved and I think we need to be careful about how we progress with the alcohol issue in this country."

Despite an initial surge in alcohol-related crime in Kent after the new licensing laws were introduced, they have since come down significantly.

According to Kent Police, there were 5,614 offences committed under the influence of intoxicating substances between November 2005 and October 2006.

But there were only 4,637 in the year that followed – a drop of 17.4 per cent.

Police figures state that the number of these offences is now lower – by 14 per cent – than before the new laws were introduced.

Offences committed in licensed premises were also down nearly six per cent between

BINGE: A government report claimed this week that alcohol consumption has reduced

November 2006 and October 2007 and total violent crime is down 7.3 per cent.

Chief Constable Michael Fuller, who expressed concerns before and after the law was introduced, said the falling crime rates were due to extra resources the force has put in at night times.

He said: "There's been a lot of hard work by our officers and area policing teams, linked in closely with the work done by district councils and the licensing trade, that has been successful in reducing alcohol-related crime.

"Alcohol-fuelled violence remains one of the biggest challenges we face in the county and we can't pretend to say the problem has gone away when you see some of the work our police officers have to do in some town centre areas, particularly on a Friday or Saturday night."

The results of a Government review into the effects of the new law were announced this week.

It found alcohol consumption and crime had actually gone down nationally, although some areas have seen disorder and violent crime rise.

On Friday, the Conservatives said they will raise taxes on strong beers, ciders and alcopops in a bid to tackle binge drinking should they win the next general election.

Alcopops will see the biggest rise, with the rate of duty trebling.

The extra revenue would then be used to reduce tax on low-strength lagers and ciders.

RESCUE: All Saints in Boughton Aluph is just one of the churches in line for a grant

Hallelujah! Rural churches get cash to save buildings

SOME of Kent's ancient rural churches have been given a financial lifeline to stop them falling into disrepair.

English Heritage has announced nearly £800,000 worth of grants to be given to seven churches in need of urgent repair work.

The biggest grant is to St Margaret's Church in Rainham, Medway, which is to receive £218,000 towards the cost of vital roof repairs.

A church has existed at the site since the eighth century, with much of the current building constructed in the 13th, 14th and 15th centuries.

Reverend Canon Alan Vousden, the parish priest at St Margaret's, said the money would be vitally important to keeping the church in use.

He said: "This church has been through its good times and its bad times and has probably been nearly lost once or twice in its history.

"We didn't want to be the generation where we lost it forever.

"We discovered the problem in the roof in 2005 and were told by a structural engineer it had a life of four or five years.

"This is not all the money we need, but it is a stepping stone on the way. We've got to match the grant and more but we are well on the way to doing that."

The other churches to receive grants are:

- All Saints, Boughton Aluph, Ashford – £157,000

- All Saints, Eastchurch, Swale – £103,000

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

- All Saints, Maidstone – £85,000
- St Mary, Swale – £83,000
- St Mary, Chartham, Canterbury – £67,000
- St Mary Magdalene, Gillingham – £58,000.

All the churches are either grade I or II listed buildings.

Zoe McMillan, English Heritage's historic building surveyor, said the grants were almost all to "keep the churches standing".

She said: "These are churches that would struggle to raise this sort of money independently.

"On the whole they are country churches, with one or two exceptions, that often have very small congregations.

"They don't get money from the state for day-to-day running, so the grants make a huge difference.

"All the work is urgent. One of our criteria is the work has to be done within two years otherwise there is a risk of loss to the public.

"For the church in Rainham, if the nave roof isn't repaired it will have to be closed. These grants are about keeping them open above all else."

English Heritage announced grants worth in excess of £15 million to 160 churches across the UK.

Bank buys into Chunnel

BIG moves are afoot which could end up with one of the world's largest global investment banks as the biggest investor in Channel Tunnel group Eurotunnel, writes Tony Patey.

Goldman Sachs underwrote a new special issue of Eurotunnel shares (i.e., it said it would pick up any that were left) aiming to raise 800 million euros, and it appears to have been left with a large part.

If this is so, then the US-based investment banking giant could become Eurotunnel's largest shareholder – with around 20 per cent – with the rest of its shares being held mainly by individual investors.

In fact, Eurotunnel bosses are relaxed about it. Jacques Gounon, chairman and chief executive officer, has said in the past he would be happy for more big investors – the so-called institutions – to be involved.

It would make the company's life much easier – for a start it's expensive and time-consuming keeping in touch with so many individual shareholders, and company chiefs are much happier dealing with a smaller number of investors.

A Eurotunnel spokesman said the bulk of the shares had gone to the big investors, and although it is not certain how much Goldman Sachs holds, it is a major slice.

The rest was snapped up by existing shareholders.

He said that probably in June there will be another special issue of shares – this time 900 million euros – as part of dealings linked with the company's refinancing last year.

This could mean that more of its shares might end up with the big investors, perhaps even Goldman Sachs again.

Sex attacker

A MAN who indecently assaulted a five-year-old girl has been told he faces a lengthy prison sentence.

Ian Gulliver, 40, from Nelson Road in Gillingham, was found guilty of the indecent assault, at a trial at Maidstone Crown Court.

The incident took place outside a house in Medway as the child was playing last July.

Gulliver has been remanded to Elmley prison on the Isle of Sheppey ahead of sentencing on April 7. The judge has advised him to prepare for a "significant custodial sentence".

Death ruling

THE DEATH of a toddler in a house fire in Kent was an accident, a coroner has ruled.

Fifteen-month-old Rosie Prior was killed in the blaze at her home on Bell Road in Maidstone last June despite her parents' efforts to save her.

Rosie died from smoke inhalation, the coroner Roger Sykes for mid Kent and Medway said, and ruled out foul play.

Concerns were raised by her parents, who had five children, that the Maidstone Housing Trust home they were in was too small for their large family.

Kiss me, Darling!

He'll give with one hand and take with the other

CHANCELLOR Alistair Darling will be making his first Budget speech next Wednesday at 12.30pm.

If I had to give him advice it would be KISS – keep it simple, stupid (in the nicest possible manner, of course). Whichever way he turns there are some steep cliffs to step over and some ominous clouds are gathering.

Readers don't need me to tell them what we're all facing – there is going to be some slowdown of the economy this year, fuel and energy prices have rocketed, and even with interest rate falls mortgages still cost a lot because of high prices people have had to pay in the first place for their homes.

Many people have high debt bills because credit has been easy – and the banks are very much to blame for this in the way they pushed loans and credit (I remember being sent a chequebook, yes a chequebook, by Barclaycard inviting me to go and spend, spend, spend). They're human – offer them cash right now, and pay later, most of them'll take it.

By TONY PATEY
KOS Media business editor

Our petrol, diesel and lager now cost an awful lot more than this time last year – and the odds are they'll cost more from next Wednesday night – so what will Mr Darling say?

Spending

The last thing he should do is slap any more tax on businesses.

With an economic slowdown they want to be encouraged to keep staff, keep ordering and keep selling.

We might see some personal tax juggling (he'll call it 'fiscal policy'), but although I would love to see a fundamental change in our tax system, now is not the time to do it.

He must try and keep consumers at least spending something to help the economy, so duty increases on fuel and beer might be kept low – with luck we may see no increases. However, if Mr Darling does that he'll claw back money somewhere else.

The devil of the Budget is always in the detail, and we won't know that until after reading the whole of the massive background document that comes out after his speech.

Back in the 1990s, I used to do a regular BBC Radio Cambridgeshire slot on local business.

The presenter asked me early one Budget day what would happen ("you have 10 seconds"). Easy – I said: "I can guarantee he'll give with one hand, and take with the other." He did then, and he'll do now.

Is it a good time to buy a car?

■ We Look at the Industry Challenges

EXCLUSIVE

With all the headlines talking of recession, the credit crunch and problems in the US economy, you would be forgiven for thinking that the car industry in the UK was in the doldrums.

However, surprisingly far from it. In 2007 total industry registrations hit 2.4m, up 2.5% over 2006, and manufacturer predictions for 08 continue to show a steady confidence. So is it a good time to buy a new car? Certainly, we are all having to tighten the purse strings due to rising oil and utility prices, but the car industry is often quick to react to this by launching tasty incentives to woo customers back into the showroom. Right now if you check the internet or look in the motoring press you will find a plethora of special finance deals, cashbacks, discounts and free options, all aiming to get you to part with your hard earned cash.

One dealer that is hard at work to ensure that their customers get a good deal is Haynes Ford in Maidstone. With the recent launches of the new S Max, Galaxy, Mondeo and now this year the new Focus, they have had a lot to talk about in terms of product, and are sharpening their pencils even further to offer customers some outstanding deals on new Fords. For example, Haynes offer a Focus Zetec Climate (2007 model year) for £11,595, or if you prefer a new Mondeo at an incredible 7.9% APR with £1,000 deposit paid by Ford credit on all petrol models.

There are many more appetisers such as the Fiesta Zetec Climate at £8,495 with Free Sports and Technology packs and the Ka Zetec Climate at £6,495.

Haynes have been in business for over 200 years so they have seen many economic cycles come and go. Managing Director, Andrew Haynes, is cautiously optimistic about the future - "when people get worried about the economy, businesses must react quickly and do everything to ensure they are as competitive as possible whilst continuing to provide outstanding levels of service. We are in the fortunate position of having a virtually all new product line up from Ford, which uses their new Kinetic design language and this really seems to appeal to our customers.

Colleagues celebrate technician's success

■ Steve Perkins receives plaque from Managing Director Andrew Haynes

Steve Perkins, from Haynes Ford, is the latest Technician within the Company to receive the coveted Master Technician status. In a ceremony with his colleagues, Managing Director, Andrew Haynes, presented Steve with a plaque and a personally signed letter from Roelant De Waard, the Chairman and Managing Director of Ford Motor Company congratulating him on his achievement.

Operations Director, Peter Wright, said "Steve has worked very hard to reach the top of his game and joins our elite team of Master Technicians, who represent the very best skills that the industry has to offer".

Commenting on Steve Perkins' achievement Andrew Haynes said "As a Company we put a lot of emphasis on training and I think we are now unusual in the industry to have quite so many top technicians working under one roof. This means our customers get an even better service from us".

We'll make sure that we continue to offer better value than anyone else".

Ford of Europe are certainly on a roll and this year they will launch the new Kuga 4x4 as well as two all new cars in the competitive small hatchback sector, and if their forecasts for the UK market come in as expected then all in the UK's car world will be well, at least for Ford. If you are considering buying a new car then you should certainly visit Haynes as they understand people's financial pressures and will find a deal to suit all needs, whilst still offering a personal local service.

IN BRIEF

Investment in Accident Repair

The Haynes Ford Accident Repair Centre at Parkwood, Maidstone is investing over £70,000 this year to meet new Ford 'Premium' accreditation standards. As cars get more complex it is important that they are repaired by brand specialists with the training and tools to do it properly. Everyone has the right to insist with their insurer that their car is repaired by the brand specialist.

Fiat Success

Haynes Trucks in Maidstone sold out its Fiat van allocation during its first year with the franchise. With the launch of the new baby van Fiorino and the new Scudo being voted the International Van of the Year 2008, this success looks set to continue.

Arable Farming Upturn

With strong commodity prices things are looking up for arable farmers. Haynes' New Holland, Case IH and JCB agricultural businesses saw strong sales of farm machinery in 07 and with increasing world food demand and pressures on land space, it is hoped that the rural economy will continue to receive a much needed boost.

Teachers may go on strike over pay settlement

By PHIL REILLY

phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

TEACHERS across the county could walk out for a day next month in a row over pay.

The National Union of Teachers has begun balloting its members over the possibility of a one-day strike to take place on Thursday, April 24.

As with many other public sector workers, most notably the police, teachers are unhappy with a pay settlement from the Government that they claim is, in effect, a pay cut.

They have been given a 2.45 per cent pay increase for 2008-09, as recommended by an independent pay review body, which is slightly more than police officers were offered.

John Walder, a semi-retired teacher from Canterbury and local NUT spokesman, said the point of the strike was to "demonstrate disapproval of what the Government is up to on the pay front".

He said: "People who have been around as long as I have see teachers' pay getting to the point where it becomes ridiculous."

"Teachers across the population as a whole are well educated and come from the same pot as people who go into industries such as medicine and law. Their salaries have fallen away compared to people they were at university with.

"It could have a serious affect on teacher recruitment."

There are approximately 16,000 full and part-time teachers in Kent, around half of which are NUT members.

Affordable

The other major teachers' union, the NASUWT, has decided not to ballot its members about strike action.

A spokesman said: "Although we would have liked a larger pay rise, it was felt that the deal offered enough that balloting would be unlikely".

Cllr Mark Dance, the county council's cabinet member for education operations, resources and skills, said the council would not support strike action.

He said: "If the NUT ballot leads to a strike, our advice to governing bodies and headteachers will be to stay open if at all possible and take all possible measures to continue to provide teaching and learning for pupils.

"The teachers' pay claim is a national one, so KCC has no direct influence over the level of settlement, but we would always argue that any pay settlement should be affordable within funding arrangements."

A spokesman for the Department of Children, Schools and Families said a strike would cause disruption to children's learning.

She said: "As teachers and NUT members see the details of the award we think they will agree it is fair and responsible in the current economic climate."

"The 2.45 per cent award for teachers, recommended to us by the independent pay review body, is above the current CPI inflation rate and the Government's inflation target."

"Everybody understands, including teachers that we need to have a firm control of public sector pay in order to keep inflation low, mortgage rates low and the economy stable."

Catwalk event celebrates town's multiculturalism

A GROUP of young people from ethnic minorities took to the catwalk this week for an evening of fashion and dance.

The Gravesend Young Ethnic Girls Group organised the event at the town's Woodville Halls Civic Centre last Friday evening as a celebration of multiculturalism.

The event, which was sponsored by the Prince's Trust, included a fashion show, dance performances and music from Indian singer Reenie.

Naresh Katnoria, KCC's development worker for black, minority and ethnic communities, said: "The group wanted to do something to showcase local talents from different communities to highlight what young people can do together. They have successfully got local businesses to support the event by making the initial contact, and we then followed this up."

At Barretts Jaguar we aim to offer you great service.

Huge cash boost for arts building projects

TWO major arts projects are to be given a £3 million boost.

The South East England Development Agency (Seed) has announced massive funding boosts for two Canterbury arts centres - the Marlowe Theatre and the Beane Institute museum and library.

The agency is to spend £2m on a property next door to the Marlowe in order to allow it to expand. Canterbury City Council will also put in between £13.5m-16m towards the Marlowe project, with KCC contributing up to £4m.

The new Marlowe will include a three-tier auditorium with 1,200 seats that will provide a better view and acoustics. It will allow bigger shows to be staged. There will also be a second, smaller, more flexible performance space.

A further £975,000 will go to the Beane Institute to pay for an extension and better access for users.

Oona Muirhead, Seed's executive director for sustainable prosperity, said: "The Marlowe Theatre is already very successful, contributing some £13m to the local economy."

"The plans for an inspirational new building and café culture experience, together with the community facilities at the Beane, will transform that part of the city centre into a vibrant cultural quarter."

"Together, the projects will bring an additional £35m income per annum into Canterbury and east Kent."

FILMS will continue to be classified independently without interference from Parliament, it was confirmed this week.

Julian Brazier, the Conservative MP for Canterbury and Whitstable, has failed in his bid to increase censorship of video games and films containing violent and sexual material.

Mr Brazier, along with a group of cross-party MPs, wanted to give Parliament greater control over the decisions of the British Board of Film Classification.

The BBFC said it was pleased that Mr Brazier's bid had failed.

Sue Clark, spokeswoman for the board, said: "Obviously we are pleased. The BBFC has always been independent of Parliament and the Government.

"We do not make our classifications based on a whim, there are guidelines drawn up based on public consultation and therefore the bulk of the public's views.

"There are people who think we are too lax and people who think we are too strict – we are trying to get that middle ground and most of the time people think we get it right.

"It is not a science and every film has different issues. A lot of this is about personal taste and personal taste is not something we can legislate for."

Mr Brazier met with the Prime Minister Gordon Brown on Wednesday after his private member's bill failed in its second reading in the Houses of Commons last Friday.

He promised not to give up the crusade against video nasties and, what he sees, as the liberalisation of the BBFC's guidelines.

"I have managed to flag up the issue at a time when both major parties are reviewing their policy on this issue," he said.

Mr Brazier and the sponsors of his bill believe there is a direct link between people watching violent acts on screen and committing violent acts.

Gordon Brown said in Parliament that he shares Mr Brazier's concerns but is withholding any recommendations until the Byron review is published at the end of March.

Dr Tanya Byron has been asked by the Government to look at the risks to children from exposure to potentially harmful or inappropriate material on the internet and in video games.

The Ashford-based Mary Whitehouse-inspired campaign group Mediawatch UK was disappointed the bill failed.

Director John Beyer said: "He was trying to give public accountability though Parliament. Given the problems with antisocial behaviour and knife and gun crime, which I think film and the media influence, where there are real problems we have to have a joined-up approach to dealing with it."

During the bill's second reading, Liberal Democrat spokesman Don Foster said that if MPs were to start getting involved in the process to ban films "sales would rocket".

He said: "The proposals contained within this bill would give politicians an undue and dangerous influence over these sorts of issues."

Members of the traditionalist right-wing faction of the Conservatives the Cornerstone Group were among sponsors of the bill.

Leading academic Simon Shaw, who is a criminal justice lecturer at the University of Kent, said the bill had all the hallmarks of a classic moral crusade.

"I think the public consultation is more likely to attract a better overview of what people want to see than the motivated moral crusaders on this issue," Dr Shaw said.

VIOLENT: Viewers will still be able to watch films like Cannibal Holocaust

Improving travelling in Kent

Your one-stop guide to information and advice on travelling

Kent Highways Services goes underground

Kent is widely recognised as a beautiful county, but did you know that a lot of that beauty is the result of a varied geology hiding underground? It's this diverse geology that gives Kent a wide range of environments including flat lands in North Kent, chalk downs in mid Kent and valleys of the Weald in West Kent.

There's more to this geology than just beauty though, and at Kent Highway Services, we recognise that it's vital to protect and take account of Kent's geology when carrying out our everyday work.

Water supplies in Kent are predominantly sourced from chalk and greensand areas, so it's obviously important to protect these areas, but there's a wider issue too. Geological materials are particularly vulnerable to climate change and changes in the rain fall and temperatures can lead to subsidence, heave, landslip and increased erosion of subsoil.

So how is Kent Highway Services involved? Well, we hold a database of exploratory holes that have been carried out by us over the last 50 years and we combine this with computer based geological maps, historical topographical maps, aerial photograph records and the expert knowledge of our geotechnical engineers.

Having this information to hand means that we can plan reliable construction methods, make the most of natural and innovative materials and it means that we're able to quickly identify the cause of any problems in the ground. We also have access to a wide range of methods for ground exploration in difficult circumstances and accredited soil testing facilities for rapid response in emergencies.

Consideration for Kent's geology goes into our forward planning too – we are increasingly using sustainable drainage systems, including soakaways, to reduce the amount of 'run off' water going into watercourses and avoid the risk of subsidence and local surface flooding.

Kent Highway Services is much more than just roads, and you can find out more about our work by logging on to www.kent.gov.uk/highways

How you can help us keep drains clean

You may not pay much attention to the grates over the drains in the roads, but they are critical for the drainage of rainwater that falls onto the highway. Kent has over 200,000 highway drainage gullies and we routinely visit every one for maintenance cleaning.

However, we do need your help to be able to carry out our cleaning effectively. We often have problems accessing gullies because vehicles are parked over them and we need the cooperation of residents and other road users to move their vehicles for short periods while works are being carried out.

We will always notify you in advance if gully cleaning is planned in your street but each year we have increasing difficulty in accessing gullies and that can lead to complaints of flooding on the highway.

There's another consequence of obstructed gullies too – return visits in an attempt to access the gully can end up costing thousands of pounds and, in many cases, after several unsuccessful attempts we have to leave a gully unattended until the next routine visit.

We're working to improve the way that we notify you about planned works, but please help us by moving your vehicle for the short time that we need. Please also bear in mind that we need the equivalent of three cars lengths around a gully for the cleansing lorry to get sufficient access.

If you have difficulties or a good reason for not moving your vehicle, you should not be unduly worried, but it would help us if you could advise us of your position by calling Kent Highway Services on 08458 247 800.

It is actually an offence under the Highway Act 1980 to unreasonably obstruct the highway and prevent highway work, but we hope that you'll work with us to make routine maintenance run smoothly and keep the roads clear for everyone.

See www.KentTV.com for up-to-date travel information

Advance Warning

The A229 Bluebell Hill will be closed uphill, towards Chatham, between 9pm on Friday 28 March until 5am on Monday 31 March.

Pothole progress

Potholes are a nationwide problem that are made worse by saturation of the highway network during periods of extreme weather and flooding. Our road network here in Kent is no exception and we focus on using our funding as efficiently as possible, to maintain the roads before damage occurs.

However, potholes are an ongoing issue and at Kent Highway Services part of our job is to repair road damage like this. We continually strive to find new, efficient ways to carry out these repairs and we've recently completed trials on a new method for fixing small potholes.

In the past, we have temporarily filled potholes with a cold bituminous material to make the highway safe, until our specialist team can carry out a permanent repair with hot bituminous material.

The new material that we're introducing is a new cold, water activated substance that gives the same durability and skid resistance of a permanent repair, so only one visit is necessary to fix the problem.

Although this new material is slightly more expensive to buy, we're making savings by only needing to repair the hole once.

There are environment benefits too because using less of the hot bituminous substance means less carbon emissions.

You can find out more about the work we do by contacting us on 08458 247 800 or by visiting our website at www.kent.gov.uk/highways

Mick Jagger death threat 'far-fetched'

By TONY PATEY

tony.patey@kosmedia.co.uk

DARTFORD-born rock legend Sir Mick Jagger was this week unavailable for comment over a media story that in 1969 he was an assassination target of the Hell's Angels.

A documentary broadcast on BBC Radio 4 claims the Stones star was the centre of a plot following a purported dispute with the motorcycle club – they dismiss the tag “gang” – over concert security.

Although Sir Mick was not available to comment, associates described the claim as “far-fetched.”

Apparently, Mick Jagger, as he was then, had vowed not to use Hell's Angel members as bouncers following the death in December 1969 of an 18-year-old fan at a notorious free performance at Altamont Speedway in Northern California.

“The Hell's Angels were so angered by Jagger's treatment of them that they decided to kill him,” Tom Mangold, the presenter of the programme, was quoted as telling Britain's Sunday Telegraph newspaper. Target was Sir Mick's holiday home in Long Island, New York.

Mr Mangold said the plan was disclosed during an interview with Mark Young, a former FBI officer, for the BBC's The FBI at 100 documentary.

Mr Mangold said the men tried to reach Sir Mick by sea.

“The boat was hit by a storm and all of the men were thrown overboard,” he was quoted as saying. They all survived but made no other attempt on his life, he added.

It was not clear whether Jagger was ever informed of the alleged plot against him.

The Hell's Angels have always denied any connection with the Altamont Speedway death, and there has been no comment so far from the HAMC London charter after a request by KOS Media.

END OF THE SIXTIES: A fan was stabbed to death at the Rolling Stones concert at Altamont Speedway in 1969, Mick Jagger recently (above)

A POLICEMAN from Maidstone has conquered Mount Kilimanjaro.

PC Gary Shaw was one of 17 who reached the summit of the 5,895m mountain in Tanzania, in East Africa.

The 47-year-old said: “It was a life-changing experience, but one with memories I will carry for the rest of my life.”

“Although you have to deal with extreme conditions and the challenges presented by the high altitude which all take their toll, it shows just what you can achieve when you put your mind to it.

“I enjoyed most meeting the friendly people of Tanzania, who despite their poverty were still happy to shout out Jambo, while battling on a daily basis with the hostile mountain environment.”

A KENT theatre troupe is taking to the stage with their version of one of Noel Coward's lesser-known plays. The Canterbury Players will be performing Fallen Angels at the Playhouse, Whitstable from Thursday to Saturday.

Hospital letter

WEST Kent MPs have written to the Health Secretary Alan Johnson urging him to give final approval to the new hospital planned for Pembury near Tunbridge Wells.

They said that after the C difficile outbreaks and "indignity" of mixed-sex wards patients and staff deserved better. Mr Johnson was asked to reveal his decision by the end of the month.

Villagers back rescue bid for ancient palace

By JENNA PUDELEK

jennie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

MORE than 100 villagers voted unanimously to back a parish council in its bid to help restore a historically important archbishop's palace in Kent as a tourist and visitor attraction.

Last month KOS Media revealed the £8 million project to restore and conserve the complex, parts of which date back to the 12th century, for public use had reached a funding crisis.

But the parish council of the village of Charing near Ashford vowed to do all it could to protect the dilapidated palace – which made it to the finals of the BBC's Restoration programme in 2004 – and after a meeting last Wednesday residents overwhelmingly backed their plans.

The Traditional Buildings Preservation Trust (TBPT) is currently in the process of buying the Grade-I listed complex from its private owner.

The trust said the Government's decision to take money from the Heritage Lottery Fund to pay for the 2012 Olympics meant the trust was unlikely to succeed if it applied for a grant.

It could mean that most of the complex would have to be sold off to private owners.

Cllr Tylden Reed, the chairman of the parish council, said: "I'm absolutely delighted,

LANDMARK: The restoration project for the archbishop's palace in Charing is in crisis as is the rest of the parish council, with the strength of support shown at the meeting, which bodes well for the future of the project."

It was decided that the best chance the project had to gain outside funding was if it can be shown that the Great Hall was to be used by the general public, he said.

Alex MacLaren, secretary of the TBPT, said: "Whilst we were not there [at the meeting] we welcome the decision of the village to try to find a way to move the village hall into the complex so it is not lost to the public completely."

He said the trust would be working closely with the parish council once the sale of the palace has been completed.

A spokeswoman for the Heritage Lottery Fund said it was happy to work with the trust to help them find a way to conserve the buildings.

Damian Green, the Tory MP for Ashford, sent a statement of support to the parish council, which read: "It is obviously hugely disappointing that the needs of the Olympics have deterred the trust from applying for funds, but it is encouraging the Heritage Lottery Fund still says it is interested in preserving the building."

KCC £70m pension payout

THE amount that Kent County Council pays out in pensions contributions has risen to more than £70 million a year.

According to a report by the Taxpayers' Alliance campaign group, KCC has the third biggest pensions spend of any local authority in the UK.

In 2006-07, the group claims KCC paid out £71,700,000 – or £52 per person in the county, up 12.9 per cent on the previous year.

A spokesman for the Taxpayers' Alliance, said: "These pensions are the results of high numbers of staff and high rates of pay."

Cllr Alex King, KCC deputy leader, accused the Taxpayers' Alliance of "attacking authorities for something they are not responsible for".

ADVERTISERS ANNOUNCEMENT

YOU AND YOUR WELLBEING

YES, we've still got our wobbly tums and bouncy bums, but with January's faddy diets way behind us, it's time to put a bit of thought into the way we live. We all want to live longer, be thinner, smarter, fitter, feel better and have more energy to participate in life. In short, we all want a happy life.

Whether you need a bit more energy to take up something new or you simply can't run around after the grandkids, like you did with your own children, making a few small changes will make the world of difference to how you look and feel.

In nature, many things get stronger as they get older... look at any tree. We humans often see age as a weakness and forget that with growing older comes the strength and experience future generations depend on. You're bursting with knowledge, inner strength and know how to enjoy yourself – come on, those smile lines came from years of laughter!

This is the time to invest in yourself and think about your most fragile possession, your body. Take good care of your body and your body will take good care of you.

And because what you eat plays a vital part in shaping your life, looking after 'me' also means eating well. The good news is that incorporating foods that benefit your health and wellbeing and avoiding those that don't is really simple. Take saturated fat for instance – it's the bad fat you can live without. Omega 3 & 6 are the good fats, you probably need a bit more of and as for artificial this and that - you can definitely banish those for good. You don't have to eat rabbit food or spend a fortune. It's a question of balance. Just make a few little changes and notice a big difference.

Which is where we like to think we can help. At Alpro we're particularly passionate about wellbeing.

Wellbeing in its widest sense – how it affects you and your environment.

Alpro soya brings you the goodness of the whole soya bean. Its tasty range is naturally low in saturated fat, contains Omega 3 and 6 and is free from artificial colours and preservatives. Alpro range includes alternatives to milk, yogurts, custards, cream and indulgent desserts and is available in most major supermarkets. Alpro soya Treat your body with care and it will return the favour. Make your body the best place to live.

Alpro soya's 'You and Your Wellbeing' guide is a handy booklet, designed to make taking the first steps to better health and wellbeing a piece of cake! It's full of interesting hints and tips on nutrition, exercise, relationships and environment. What's more, it contains delicious and nutritious recipes, secrets on how to break habits and a weekly planner, to help you keep on track.

Cushing's collection

Paintings created by screen legend Peter Cushing will go on auction later this month

PETER Cushing may have made his name in some of the most groundbreaking horror movies in British cinema history, but there was a softer side to him.

It is a side that is best demonstrated in a collection of paintings that go under the hammer at the Canterbury Auction Galleries later this month.

It seems the man behind such classic Hammer Horror roles as Dr Frankenstein, Dracula's nemesis Dr Van Helsing and super sleuth Sherlock Holmes was a dab hand with oils and watercolours and had a keen eye for a landscape or an ocean view.

Headscarf

Peter Cushing was born and raised in Surrey, but spent much of his later years living in Kent. He lived in Whitstable, the scene for one of his watercolours, before his death at the age of 81 from cancer at the Pilgrims Hospice in Canterbury in 1994.

Many of the paintings are watercolours that are heavily influenced by the work of Mr Cushing's close friend and mentor Edward Seago. The collection also includes a design for a woman's headscarf, commissioned for Marks & Spencer, featuring a portrait of Charles Dickens and images of many of his characters.

The paintings were bequeathed to his friend Bernard Broughton and a selection was used for a fundraising calendar for the hospice last year.

Mr Broughton, 75, described his friend as "a terrific guy, a terrific actor, model maker and author", as well as a naturally talented painter.

He said: "Although he didn't want to leave his home in Whitstable, his association with the hospice became very strong."

"I stayed with him during his last three months in the hospice and we had some of the most wonderful conversations even though you knew there wasn't much left. We were very close and, without meaning to sound emotional, I really loved him."

As well as his early horror films, Mr Cushing found fame among later generations through his role as Grand Moff Tarkin in 1977's Star Wars: A New Hope.

The art works, 25 in total, go under the hammer on March 18.

They are expected to fetch around £12,000.

THOUSANDS of environmental campaigners are set to converge on the Kingsnorth power station for a major event this summer.

Energy company E.on wants to build the UK's first coal-fired power station for 30 years at the Medway site, which is why it has been chosen as the location of the Camp for Climate Action from August 4 to 11.

Last year, 2,000 protesters set up camp at Heathrow over plans for a third runway.

Anna Jackson, spokeswoman for the camp, said this year's could be even bigger.

She said: "This is a really vital campaign – Kent is the front line of the climate change agenda in the UK."

"A new coal power station would be a disaster for the climate. Kingsnorth is the first of seven planned around the UK."

"If it is approved it will set a precedent, which is why it must be stopped."

The camp aims to highlight the dangers of the continuing reliance on fossil fuels – relating to E.on's proposals – and warn of the dangers of relying on agrofuels, or biofuels.

Camp member Charlie Owens said: "Biofuels have been proposed as a solution to climate change."

"But new studies confirm that they are just as dangerous as fossil fuels. And they create the illusion we can carry on as usual."

"In the end we can only stop climate change if we challenge the growth economy and start putting people and planet first."

Miss Jackson said that biofuels, which are

Green campaigners target station

Kingsnorth will be the focus of major demonstration this summer as Camp for Climate Action heads to Kent to lobby against E.on's coal-fired plans derived from food crops, lead to land being used to grow fuel rather than food, which would increase poverty in developing countries.

The intensity of the farming needed would contribute to climate change because forests would be cut down or peat lands drained.

This would mean the loss of valuable 'carbon sinks', which trap the greenhouse gas rather than releasing it into the atmosphere.

Last week Greenpeace climate change activists climbed onto a plane and the roof of the Houses of Parliament protesting over the proposed runway at Heathrow.

A spokesman said the organisation was fully behind the aims of the Camp for Climate Action and supported the decision to protest at Kingsnorth.

The camp plans to march from a one-day event at Heathrow across London to Kingsnorth to kick off this year's awareness-raising exercise.

Protesters say this will highlight Government and corporate collusion to expand and use fossil fuel industries despite scientific evidence and advice to find alternative energy sources.

Miss Jackson said the Kent camp will provide people with an opportunity to learn about climate change through a series of workshops and witness the sustainable existence of the camp using solar and wind power and sourcing food locally.

NOT SO GREEN: KoS, January 6, 2008

"People can come along and find out the issues and solutions and the political questions that we have to ask to solve the problem," she added.

A spokesman for E.on said: "Clearly we support their right to protest, however we certainly hope it is a peaceful protest and that they don't trespass on our land."

A spokeswoman for Kent Police said: "We will always facilitate lawful protest. We are aware of the announcement and will plan our resources accordingly."

Needless to say, there is full wheelchair access throughout the building.

Independence, companionship and support

Nobody interferes with your independence at Darwin Court because your apartment belongs to you and you can "shut the front door" and enjoy your privacy whenever you want.

But there is always the option of socialising in the attractive hotel-style lounge or the function room, and a luxurious guest suite is available for when you want to put up additional friends or family.

Residents at Darwin Court also have the peace of mind of knowing that a member of staff is on site 24-hours a day. The day-to-day running of the development is supervised by a neighbourly Estate Manager, backed up by a team of assistants, who help to ensure the welfare of apartment owners.

In addition, all residents have access to an emergency call system, via pull cords in all the main rooms of their apartment.

Let someone else take care of you

All apartments at Darwin Court have fitted, easy-to-use kitchens. But if you don't feel like cooking, you can use the development's very own restaurant, which has a waitress and is open seven days a week for lunch.

In the event of illness, your restaurant meal can be brought to your apartment.

You can enjoy the landscaped garden without having to worry about doing the weeding, and the service charge includes one hour of domestic assistance a week in your own apartment. Further assistance can be arranged and tailored to meet individual needs.

Security

Freedom from security worries makes for a happier, more carefree retirement.

All apartments are fitted with a camera entry system for viewing visitors, which is through an owner's television set.

WARZONE: A soldier in the rubble of the Battle of Monte Cassino

Italian campaign veterans could be due for a medal

By PHIL REILLY

phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

THE Italian campaign of 1943 to 1945 saw some of the bloodiest fighting in Western Europe of the entire Second World War.

After the Italians surrendered in September 1943, Allied troops from Britain, America, Canada and a host of other nations marched up the east and west of the country, encountering German resistance all the way.

In early 1944, Allied troops were closing in on Rome, but the Germans had set up sturdy defences to the south of the city.

In what became known as the Battle of Monte Cassino, Allied troops attempted four offensives against the Nazi troops.

The battles were bloody and losses were great, but eventually the Allies broke the German line and headed towards the capital. Rome was declared an open city by the German Army and the Americans took possession of it on June 4.

The British troops were part of the Eighth Army that came to Italy straight from the successful North African campaign.

After Monte Cassino, they continued north through central Italy, capturing Florence and pressing on through the north east and into Austria in 1945.

In total, around 198,000 British and Commonwealth troops lost their lives in the campaign, as well as 114,000 Americans.

Veterans who took part in the campaign were awarded the Italy Star medal, but many missed out on the honour.

The Italy Star Association is now trying to track down survivors of the conflict to make sure they are presented with the medals they earned in battle.

Many Kent soldiers took part in the campaign, fighting both with Kent-based regiments and others from across the country.

The Kent regiments that took part included the Queen's Own Royal West Kent Regiment and The Buffs (Royal East Kent Regiment).

The association's national secretary Roy Quinton said that "countless" Kent soldiers would have fought in the campaign.

He said: "It is hard to say how many would have taken part because as well as the Kent regiments many soldiers ended up in others from different places."

"Many people from London and the South East found themselves in Scottish regiments. As the Army was losing lots of men it was filling in the gaps with whoever they could."

"There are many who have not yet learned of the existence of the Italy Star Association."

Any veterans who took part in the campaign, or their family members, who wish to claim their medals, can do so by contacting Mr Quinton on 0208 241 0275.

Appeal for foster carers

By JAMIE MCGINNIS

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

A CHARITY that cares for some of the most vulnerable children in the country has launched a fostering service.

The Caldecott Foundation, which is based in Smeeth, near Ashford, provides residential care for around 50 youngsters aged five to 16, who have suffered unimaginable neglect and abuse.

A school on the site provides primary and secondary education for the young people, some of who may have had little or no formal schooling and often have challenging behavioural patterns.

Erica Eversfield, Caldecott's supervising social worker, said the charity was launching a fostering service as part of a longer-term strategy to help the children rebuild their lives.

"It is about getting them out of the institution," she said. "It is preparation for returning them to their own families and for the future within a family environment."

"Their own families will catch up with them eventually, whether it is when they are 16 or later on. And they may well go on to have their own families and their own children."

"We are trying to equip them with all these skills."

Miss Eversfield said the service had been set up in response to both a need for specialised foster carers to cope with Caldecott children whose early lives had been blighted by pain and neglect, and increased demand from social services departments.

"Initially we will fit the young people through from the houses [at Caldecott]. There is definitely a need for the children that we look after. Because they are at the end of the scale there is quite a difficult, traumatic background."

"They have quite a few breakdowns and they may have already been in placements in the short term," she said.

The charity has been caring for children for almost a century and is recognised as one of the leading centres of its type.

Jamie Bromfield, who is the manager of the new fostering service, said: "We are looking for highly motivated people, who enjoy life and would be dedicated to providing the very best standards of care to children who have suffered extreme trauma and disruption."

He added: "The children will have spent some time with us at Smeeth in our residential homes, attending our on-site school, and learning to rebuild trust and relationships with adults with the help of therapists, social workers and a psychologist."

"After that, the essential next step is to join foster carers, who can continue the process of helping them turn their lives around."

"Achieving that is an incredibly rewarding experience."

"Each child has a need to feel valued and supported in a safe environment with clear boundaries and expectations."

HELP: Jamie Bromfield and Erica Eversfield from the Caldecott Foundation

Foster carers will benefit from intensive training, on-call support and competitive rates of pay, he said.

Mr Bromfield added: "Our foster carers will be uniquely well supported. Unlike many fostering agencies, our foster carers will have the backing of a well-resourced organisation which has all the skills and experience built up from almost a century of looking after vulnerable children."

It is hoped once the service is established social services departments from councils will also place children with Caldecott foster carers.

If you think you may be able to provide a home for one of Caldecott's children contact Mr Bromfield or Miss Eversfield on 01303 815648 or email fostering@caldecottfoundation.co.uk.

RELIEF: Allan Clifford treats back sufferer Anita Elson

Remedial therapy that gave me my life back

By JENNA PUDELEK

CONSTANT and crippling back pain left Anita Elson hunched over and debilitated throughout her twenties.

Physiotherapy and osteopathy sessions did little to alleviate the aches or regain her posture and she faced a lifetime on prescription painkillers – until she discovered an complementary therapy called the Bowen technique.

Miss Elson, who lives in Herne Bay, said: "I used to get muscle spasms every 30 minutes which left me in tears.

"I used to dread catching a cold, because the coughing and sneezing would send tremendous pain down my back and leg. Everyday tasks were impossible.

"Simply making the bed in the morning or getting dressed was a painful experience."

The 35 year old was born with a dislodged pelvis. But it was in her early 20s, she said, that it became severe.

"I was bent over like an elderly woman and the pain shot down my right leg, so whichever way I moved, I was in pain," she said.

Miss Elson, who works as a secretary in Canterbury, was treated with electro-stimulation pain relief at a physiotherapist.

"I used to suspend myself with my hands from a door frame or the stairwell just to stretch my spine.

"I also received ultrasound on a weekly basis at the osteopaths, so the bleeding on my spine – caused by pelvic problems – could be lessened and the inflammation subside.

"I went for about 30 sessions with the osteopath, sometimes being manipulated by three people at the same time," she said.

In 2006 Miss Elson's father suggested she tried the Bowen technique, a massage therapy developed in the fifties by an Australian osteopath Tom Bowen, which he had been using for aches on his arm, neck and back.

After becoming convinced the pain would never go completely and resigning herself to a life feeling dozy on super-strength painkillers she was ready to try anything.

Miss Elson went for a session with Bowen therapist Allan Clifford at the Kent Bowen Clinic. She said: "I went with an open mind and it was completely different to anything I had tried before. It was almost instantaneous pain relief – I wish I'd found it years ago."

The technique is described as a "soft tissue remedial therapy"; the therapist uses fingers or thumbs to move over muscle, ligament tendon and fascia, which is connective tissue found throughout the body.

Mr Clifford, who has been practicing the technique for eight years, said a growing number of people had been turning to the drug-free remedy in the past few years.

"Normally it takes around three sessions to see results but sometimes it can be instant. It can be used to treat a range of conditions.

"I've treated a six-week-old baby for colic and a 95 year old for muscle pains. It can help with anything from dyslexia to bed wetting," he said.

Although the technique is not a recognised NHS treatment, Mr Clifford said some GPs refer patients to him for the £25-an-hour sessions.

The Bowen technique is one of the complementary and natural therapies to be regulated by the Complementary and Natural Healthcare Council launching in April.

Developed by therapists in partnership with the Prince's Foundation for Integrated Health, it is aimed at providing a credible, robust and professional voluntary regulatory system for complementary healthcare.

Professionals practicing therapies such as homeopathy, yoga and shiatsu are among those who can sign up so their clients can see they are properly qualified and can complain to the CNHC if they have a problem.

Mr Clifford said: "It's a great idea. I will of course sign up although we already operate under a code of practice with the European College of Bowen Studies."

LEADING MAN: Harrison Ford, 65, on the set of the new Indiana Jones blockbuster

Sevenoaks pupil who grew up to be Indiana's mentor

By PHIL REILLY

phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

BRITISH actor John Hurt will be starring alongside Harrison Ford in the long awaited new Indiana Jones film.

Steven Spielberg's Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull will open in cinemas across the country in late May, with the Sevenoaks-schooled thespian thought to be playing the daredevil archaeologist's mentor, Abner Ravenwood.

The film's trailer has already proved a massive hit on the web, with Paramount estimating it was seen more than 200 million times in the first week of its release in February.

In an interview with Premiere.com, Mr Hurt described director Steven Spielberg as 'God', but admitted it was not the sort of film he would normally choose to do.

He said: 'I want to be careful here, because I don't want to make it sound as if I'm anti-the film - I'm not at all. But if I was asked what I would choose to do, it would be lightweight for me, at least for that sort of time commitment.'

"But having accepted it, I enjoyed working with Steven hugely, and we had a great cast. I just wish we'd had something of fabulous interest between each other to act."

Mr Hurt also described George Lucas, the Star Wars creator and producer of Indiana

Jones, as "a bit socially crippled really", adding: "Not good with people. So I just left him alone."

The 67-year-old former Alien, V for Vendetta and Harry Potter star was full of praise, however, for the film's star Harrison Ford, 65, describing him as "a proper leading actor".

He added: "He led the company. He knows the franchise backwards, but he's never cocky with it, he's hard-working, funny, self-deprecatory, utterly charming."

Tight-lipped

"He always was two years younger than me. I told him that when he had his birthday. I said, 'You're still younger than me, it doesn't matter how old you get.' But he was fabulous, and he was fit, and he did all his fights. I mean, it was fantastic to watch."

The film's producers, cast and crew have so far remained tight-lipped about the plot and characters.

Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull is the fourth film in the series, which started in 1981 with Indiana Jones and the Raiders of the Lost Ark.

That was followed in 1984 by Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom and in 1989 by Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade.

Mr Hurt got his first taste of acting as a child at St Michael's Prep School in Sevenoaks, where his first part was in a play called The Bluebird.

KENT ON SUNDAY

COMMENT

Striking French cost us millions

WHY should businesses in Kent be made to suffer just because of a minor grievance from a few French seamen?

Commuters and families too have been affected by the clogging up of our transport infrastructure.

The cost to Kent will run to millions and millions of pounds.

At a time when the economy is looking fragile, this is the last thing the county needs.

Orders and deliveries will be held up and cash flow will suffer and for small and medium sized enterprises this could have a damaging effect.

Employees across the county will have been late for work, missing tens of thousands of valuable working hours.

And people who depend on vital services will be have been affected.

One obvious solution to these ills would be a lorry park. Kent County Council announced a year ago it had found sites, but we are still waiting for real progress.

Why the delay? It is a more pressing need for the county council than some of the other projects it has been spending its time and money on in the last 12 months.

Here is an opportunity to do something big to improve the lives of council taxpayers in a tangible way, so why not grasp it?

There is another side to this sorry story and it centres on why we must continue to endure hardship as a result of another country's industrial disputes.

Surely it is time for our Government to get tough and persuade their French counterparts to crack down on these strikes – or threaten a big writ claiming massive compensation and swinging new taxes on foreign truckers.

OPINION: Some appealing options

ON TUESDAY morning, 20,000 letters were delivered in Kent and Medway telling parents their children's new secondary school on National Decision Day.

Sadly, nearly 5,000 of these did not receive their first choice and around 1,000 did not get any school on their list.

For those parents, what should you do?

First, don't panic. Appealing immediately, writing angry letters, no matter how unhappy you are makes no difference, except perhaps to damage your chances at your desired school.

Evidence

There is no disadvantage in accepting the school you have been offered then appealing for any you prefer that you have already applied to.

If you decide to appeal, my advice is write a simple letter to the admission authority informing it you are appealing and that a more detailed letter will follow.

This enables you to compose an appeal letter at your leisure, making sure you enclose all the facts and supporting evidence you can obtain.

After March 27 you can apply afresh to any Kent school you have not previously named on your application form.

If you are turned down, you

Don't give up hope if your child doesn't get their first choice of secondary school, says PETER J READ then have rights of appeal to that school. Each local authority has a choice of advisers to provide independent advice. Contact them at 01622 694 073 or 01634 331 110.

However, before appealing, is it a worthwhile exercise? If it's a grammar school that admits children who have passed with the basic score, find out your child's test scores from the primary school as soon as possible.

In Kent, was there a headteacher assessment? Are there reasons why your child underperformed; have you alternative evidence that they are of grammar school ability, are scores close to the pass mark?

If none of these you may be wise to make alternative arrangements.

If your child passed the test but still has not been offered a place, find out from the school or education authority why they missed out, but in any case go on the waiting list.

It is usually worth appealing in such cases as chances of success are very difficult to predict.

If you are applying to one of the west Kent grammar schools that select on high scores, find out the lowest score accepted when you may be able to estimate your chances of success.

For non-selective schools ask to go on the waiting list. Look at the oversubscription rules and find out why you have been rejected.

If it is on distance grounds, by how far have you missed out?

Independent

If a church school, which is the lowest category of church affiliation accepted?

It is often worthwhile appealing as there is considerable movement before any appeal as parents take up other preferred offers, freeing up spaces and your chances are difficult to predict several months in advance (most appeals take place around May).

Many people worry about appearing before an appeal panel. Don't be. The panel will comprise three people independent of the school who will almost always do their best to put you at your ease, so that you can put your case as you would wish.

There is considerable advice available on how to make an appeal.

The school admissions authority will send you details before the appeal explaining procedures in full.

A good website is www.ace-ed.org.uk that provides general advice; my own website www.kentadvice.co.uk provides information and advice on appeals to Kent and Medway schools including grammar schools, while www.elevenplusexams.co.uk focuses on grammar school appeals, although it should be treated with caution, as contributors often do not understand Kent issues.

Whatever your situation, don't lose heart, many mismatches are sorted over the next few months, as other parents make decisions that free up school places; last year my final client was offered the school of their choice in September!

Listen to the victims

The plight of Kent workers who have been exposed to asbestos but can't claim compensation from negligent employers has been well documented in the press.

As a reminder, the issue centres on plural plaques – the first sign of asbestos damage which causes the sufferer immense worry for their future health as in many cases it leads to more serious asbestos-related illness.

What your readers may not be aware of is that the incidence of asbestos-related disease in the Medway area is much higher than the national average.

The fight for justice has now switched from the courtroom to the debating chamber in the hope of persuading the Government to sidestep the House of Lords' decision not to allow victims to claim compensation.

But while the English Parliament has, yet again, listened to the representation of big business rather than Joe Public and decided not to pass a bill, its Scottish counterpart has stolen a march on it.

The Scottish Parliament deserves immense credit for its intention to introduce a bill by the end of 2008, which guarantees that people who have developed asbestos-related conditions such as plural plaques can claim for damages.

I urge anyone with an interest in asbestos to contact their MP immediately and press them to help force the English Parliament to listen to victims' concerns and legislate accordingly.

Hugging not mugging

Recently on a visit to Royal Tunbridge Wells I was impressed by the number of people – admittedly ladies – who were kissing each other on the cheek or hugging. Men often shook hands when greeting.

The entire country of Kent should adopt such refined behaviour and then spread the Experience shows Manston dream is just a non-starter

All of my 75 years I have lived no more than one mile from the airport apart from 12 years when I lived even closer in the village of Manston.

Also, I was a warrant officer with 2433 squadron Ramsgate ATC based on the airfield.

So I do know a little more than most people about the airfield.

The location of Manston was perfect for what it was built for in the early 20th century, i.e., a military airbase near to the Continent at a time when many conflicts were taking place there.

However, the needs of a civil airport are vastly different.

- Manston is built on what was once an island

- It is surrounded by the sea on three sides

- There is only one way in and out

- There's no infrastructure on the airfield or the surrounding towns and villages to support such an airport that the so-called experts talk about.

It would take too long to put in this letter, so many other reasons why it is impossible for Manston to become a viable and profitable airport.

With a catchment area of approx 30 miles, no matter how much money is ploughed into the airport, the location dictates as a major airport it is a non-starter.

Nailing jelly to the wall

Once again no surprises from Gordon Brown in his replies to the questions your readers sent in.

Just the usual spin response to every question. Getting a straight answer from him

Where are the answers?

Yet again Gordon Brown avoids answering the question asked by your readers.

Mrs Patricia New asked about immigration from within the EU, Gordon Brown's answer was about immigration from outside the EU, and we will do nothing about the internal EU immigration, but the

Honesty is welcome

In these days of denial, obfuscation and circumlocution by public bodies the clear and candid response by Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells NHS Trust Hospitals' new management of your reporter's inquiries about the Department of Health figures for waiting times in A&E departments is welcome and hopefully sets a standard for this and other local hospitals.

We learn shortages of staff and beds have been acknowledged as the causes for these frequent breaches of the four-hour maximum waiting times and steps have been taken to rectify these: more nurses, more beds, more bed managers and more A&E consultants.

Laughing stock

With Sharia law, no-go areas, out-of-control immigration, benefit abuse, unjustified energy and petrol rises, brain drain migration, taxation on taxation and escalating youth crime and suicides, Britain has become the laughing stock of the world.

Us Brits need to take up the challenge – let's see some British bulldog spirit. At the moment we are bordering on poodle dog sickness.

We live in a supposedly democratic Christian country where millions of brave men and women have died to make it so.

We are desperately awaiting a strong leader with the attributes of Winston Churchill so we can all be proud to be British again.

Every day worried people are discussing these issues with concern. My father taught me life is about challenges and consequences.

Each and every one of us who feels as strongly as I do must now take up the challenge. Make your voice heard – phone your local radio station, pick up your pens, send emails to newspapers and lobby your MP with a no-confidence vote in this Government. This is my first letter to a newspaper – a small step maybe – but if we don't do something the consequences will be catastrophic.

University identifies a gap in the high-tech market

By PHIL REILLY

phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

THE University of Kent has joined an elite group of institutions training students at the cutting edge of security technology.

The university is regarded as a world expert in biometrics and has now joined 11 other universities in a programme to train students at the forefront of the technology.

Biometrics is the study of forms of biological identification, such as fingerprinting and retina scanning.

It has a range of uses relating to security and identification, and is the technology at the centre of the Government's proposed ID card scheme.

The university has joined the Continuing Education in Electronics Systems Integration (CEESI) training consortium and will offer four new modules.

Its electronic engineering department already works with communications companies such as Motorola and Electrone. And the consortium is backed by some of the world leaders in the electronics industry. These include Sony SDE, Infineon Technologies and Atmel.

Winston Waller, senior lecturer in electronic engineering, said joining the consortium was a "very important development" for the university.

He said: "We are joining the leading consortium providing advanced training for industry in electronic engineering in the UK and will benefit from the many advantages this brings: co-operation, marketing and financial assistance.

"It will help the university deliver modules in biometrics and security to a larger proportion of the population of engineers in UK industry who require training in this new and fast developing area."

Professor Michael Fairhurst, head of the department of electronics, added: "There is an increasing requirement in industry for skills in this area, and we are delighted our leading-edge expertise has again been recognised in the wider research and development community."

"We are especially pleased to be continuing to develop strong collaborations with important industrial companies."

The consortium aims to meet the industry's need for flexible training by establishing a pool of post-graduate modules that are mainly accessible using the internet.

The four new modules the University of Kent will be offering are: foundations of biometrics and secure systems; industrial context of biometrics; practical biometric systems; and advanced biometrics.

Inspiration offered at motivation workshops

WORKSHOPS are being held across Kent to help inspire adults who are not in employment, education or training.

It is hoped the 10 courses run throughout the spring will teach people to have ideas, gain confidence and achieve success.

Kent-based company the Enterprise Laboratory, which runs the workshops, has teamed up with the South East Development Agency (Seeda) to provide them.

James Purnell, the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, announced last week that people who are not in education, employment or training will lose their benefits if they do not carry out at least four weeks of work-related activity a year.

Ian White, managing director of the company which leads the workshops said: "These workshops combine an innovative mix of enterprise skills such as problem solving and ideas generation with the core competencies of speaking, listening and writing."

"The advantage of involving local employers is everything we discuss is given a realistic context. We hope the experience will broaden participants' horizons and stimulate motivation."

The workshops are free and last one day. Participants have the chance to study for a qualification at entry level 3 in literacy.

Clare Williams, youth enterprise manager at Seeda said: "Often people who are not in employment, education or training are left to their own devices, but Seeda recognises the importance of reaching out to this disenfranchised group to help unleash their enterprise skills."

"These workshops provide a fantastic opportunity to be inspired and learn about enterprise, in a relaxed and non-threatening environment."

For more information and to book a place on the workshops which are being held throughout March, April and May call 01795 596 700 or visit www.theislandpartnership.co.uk.

■ A BEAUTY therapist has become the first in the country to be awarded a prestigious postgraduate honour. Julie Howland, 28, owner of Skin Deep in Canterbury, passed a series of exams to achieve a postgraduate honours diploma. The qualification is from the International Dermal Institute, where Mrs Howland has been studying since 2003. She said: "My focus has been to offer clients an exceptional experience every visit."

FROM NURSERY TO UNIVERSITY AND BEYOND

MARCH 2008

The most motivating and inspirational teachers for a generation are in Kent

By JENNA PUDELEK and PHIL REILLY

FROM infants to adults, there are more educational choices available in Kent than ever before.

More young people are attending university, new academies are springing up along the length and breadth of the county and exam pass rates are improving all the time.

Cllr Chris Wells, KCC's cabinet member for children, families and educational achievement, said there has "never been a better time to enter, re-enter or simply enjoy learning in Kent".

He said: "We have schools that work with everybody from ages of three to 83, we have more colleges with more choices and more opportunities than ever before.

"But most importantly we have the most energising, motivating and inspirational teachers for a generation.

Focus

"The only thing missing is you. If you don't sign up and classrooms remain empty all that knowledge will go to waste."

In total, there are 453 primary schools, 94 secondaries, seven academies and 24 special education schools in Kent. There are 85 primaries and 19 secondaries in Medway.

There are 59 primaries and 15 secondaries, one sixth form and one academy in Bexley and 77 primaries, 17 secondaries and four special schools in Bromley.

The county is also home to a host of campuses belonging to the University of Kent, the University of Greenwich and Canterbury Christ Church University, as well as several further education colleges.

At national level, the Government recently set out ambitious goals for education until 2020 in what Ed Balls, the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families, calls the Children's Plan.

It includes a review of the primary level curriculum which aims to give a sharper focus on English and maths.

The Government believes schools in the future should be central to their communities and where possible be located on the same sites as child health services, social care and police.

It also believes parents should become more involved with the child's education – £30 million has been pledged nationally to provide more family learning to help parents and carers develop skills and learn with their children in schools.

LEARNING: There are so many options for every age – all you have to do is choose a class

Mr Balls said: "Over the next 10 years I believe this plan will herald a radical change in the range of positive activities for our young people and a revolution in the way parents are involved in their child's education."

A spokeswoman for the Department of Children, Schools and Families said the Government was closing the attainment gap and standards are rising across the board – it said in the last 10 years more than 100,000 more pupils have achieved five good GCSEs.

She added: "But we know the challenges remain which is why we published our 10-year Children's Plan and are targeting the lowest achieving children with a revamped secondary curriculum, quality qualifications and apprenticeships and investing £1 billion in one-to-one tuition and catch up classes.

"It is a top priority for us to reduce inequalities between the poorest performers and the rest.

"We are determined to make sure that all children can reach their full potential, whatever their background, gender or ability."

One of Labour's most radical policies is the controversial Diploma.

The Government has developed a range of more vocational courses, so-called Diplomas, which will be available as alternatives to GCSEs and A levels.

It is hoped they will eventually become the "qualification of choice" for students.

The Conservatives have sounded a note of caution over their introduction.

Shadow schools minister Nick Gibb said: "It is perfectly acceptable for there to be a range of different qualifications but the important thing is that they are rigorous.

Talent

"It is employers and universities that decide what the value of a given qualification is.

"If they don't believe a qualification prepares people to study or work then it affects the future of those children that are studying it.

"We support the new vocational diplomas as an alternative route for those that don't want to study for GCSEs and A levels but we oppose the Government's desire to see diplomas replace A levels altogether."

At degree level there are more courses on offer now than ever before.

This week the universities secretary John Denham asked towns and cities to come forward to bid for one of the 20 new university campuses or higher education centres planned within the next six years.

Mr Denham has said he wants to "unlock the talent" of local people and it is hoped the new institutions will provide an extra 10,000 student places.

Paul Stannard, managing director of KOS Media, said: "The face of education in Kent has changed dramatically in recent years.

"There are now more courses and more choices available to pupils, parents and adults who want to broaden their skills.

"This supplement is aimed at helping you to decide which courses may be right for you or your children."

Help getting the best start to educational life

By CHRIS MURPHY

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IT IS important that children get the best start to their education, and there are a wealth of options open to them before the first day at primary school.

Things like being able to count, knowing their alphabet and colours are a major bonus for first year pupils, as well as teachers.

If a classroom is full of children who already know the basics, teachers can forge ahead at a much faster pace.

Independent

In Kent, there are currently 715 private, voluntary and independent pre-schools, 20 children's centres and 1,344 child-care providers. By 2011 there are plans for 102 children's centres.

The number of children aged three or four in private, voluntary, independent or maintained pre-schools around the Kent County Council area is about 30,000.

In Medway, there are 111 private, voluntary and independent pre-schools, seven children's centres, with another seven due to open at the end of this month, and 308 registered child minders.

There are currently 29 nursery classes at

HANDS UP: There are many options for parents planning their children's pre-school education primary schools in Medway – three times more than there were a decade ago.

Cllr Chris Wells, KCC cabinet member for children, families and educational standards, said: "Children's centres are a proven inclusive and partnership approach to enhance the lives of all our children."

"Children's centres are key in encouraging healthy children and assisting speech and language development.

"They encourage children to enjoy childhood and respect the importance of effort and achievement."

"Many of us understand the pressures and strains of bringing up children, whether it is learning about the importance of proper nutrition, high quality childcare or simply knowing where to get advice and information, children's centres have a role to play."

From government funding to deliver free nursery places, KCC gives £8.60 to providers to deliver each 2.5 hour session for every child registered, which is the same as £3.44 an hour.

Advantage

The level of funding rises to £3.60 per hour on April 1, or £9 per two-and-a-half hour session.

Families can access 12.5 hours per week of free childcare for three and four-year-olds, according to the authority.

Parents can take advantage of as little or as much of the free entitlement as they wish. It has traditionally been delivered using up to five, two-and-a-half hour sessions.

MAKING sure a child attends school is one of the most important things a parent can do.

Unfortunately, some families think Christmas shopping takes priority.

New figures released by the Department for Schools, Children and Families show that in the run-up to Christmas last year, local authority truancy patrols stopped nearly 5,000 children who didn't have a valid reason for not being at school.

Of these, 37 per cent were with their parents. And the parents' top excuse when stopped with their truanting children was, unbelievably, shopping.

Other popular excuses were visiting relatives and friends, buying school uniform and shoes, and birthdays.

Legal

But parents face harsh penalties if they let their children skip school, including a fine of up to £2,500, a community order or even a jail sentence.

In Kent, Medway, Bexley and Bromley, around 12,000 primary and secondary school children were persistent absentees last year.

In maintained secondary schools alone there were just over 9,000 regular truants, which was approximately seven per cent of all enrolled pupils.

This figure has dropped marginally since 2005-06, down 0.6 per cent in Kent, 0.9 per cent in Medway, 1.8 per cent in Bexley and remaining the same in Bromley.

Parents are legally responsible for ensuring their children get a suitable full-time education.

To help stamp out parent-condoned absenteeism, the Government's Every Lesson Counts campaign was set up earlier this year. It encourages mothers and fathers to show their children that they think school is important.

"Perhaps the most shocking fact is that often children absent from school are with their parents," said a spokesperson for the Every Lesson Counts campaign.

Parents: Take children to school, not on a shopping trip

"The research is particularly relevant at Christmas because this is the time of year that it's most tempting to take children out of school to shop.

"Christmas is a special time, but allowing time off on school days creates a negative attitude towards it. Children learn by example – if they know you think school attendance is important, they will too."

Chris Keates, general secretary of the NASUWT teaching union, added: "Taking children out of school during term time to go shopping sends them the message that school's only important when there's nothing better to do, and that flouting the law is acceptable."

Margaret Morrissey, spokeswoman for the National Confederation of Parent Teacher Associations (NCPTA), said that while the NCPTA doesn't condone parents letting their children take the day off, part of the problem may be that increasing numbers of parents are working odd hours and shifts – and the only chance they get to go Christmas shopping with the kids is during school hours.

Christmas

She said: "At this time of year, perhaps parents would prefer it if schools finished early on a few days so they could go Christmas shopping with the kids, or even if shopping was included as a practical part of a lesson like geography.

"We've tried to get it through to parents that their children taking a day off school is not good, but the message just doesn't seem to be getting through to a lot of them."

Experts give their top tips for passing 11-plus exam

By CHRIS MURPHY
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AN EDUCATION expert has advised children preparing to take the 11-plus exam: "Don't obsess over this".

Peter Read, former headteacher at Gravesend Grammar School and now a schools adviser, said parents should ensure their children have achieved a good all-round level of education before the exam.

But he does warn parents in west Kent that private tuition may be required to ensure maximum marks, because grammar schools in the area are notorious for only taking the very best.

He said the tests in Kent County Council schools are different from those in Medway. Kent uses multi-choice verbal and non-verbal reasoning and maths, and Medway has an additional emphasis on English.

Mr Read said: "My advice for Kent parents is to purchase some books on the reasoning tests. These should then be practised but not obsessed over. Some make the mistake of going over and over the same tests."

"The maths is primarily covering the Key Stage 2 lessons the child had at school, so parents must ensure they do well at this level."

"In west Kent, towns like Tonbridge and Tunbridge Wells, the schools are extremely selective and many parents use private tuition to ensure the highest scores."

STAY CALM: Former headteacher Peter Read advises parents and pupils not to obsess

"Parents do need to ensure their children can write an extended piece of English. The maths once again is Key Stage Two, which should be taught well in the classroom hopefully."

Kent County Council says ITS tests are good predictors of how well a student will cope with the kind of academic course that expects them to take a lot of information in quickly, and think about it for themselves.

A spokesman said: "We compare Kent children's test results with how well a national sample of children did when they took the same tests without preparing beforehand."

be going up at the moment, having stayed at about 8,000-9,000 for some years.

"With regards to the 'pass rate', we offer to approximately the top 25 per cent of the ability range consistently year on year, but the number varies according to the number of children who could take part."

"Usually somewhere between 3,000 and 3,400 children across Kent are assessed suitable for grammar school at the point when results go out."

"The number may increase after we have sent out the results, because of successful appeals for grammar school places."

There is a proposal in the KCC area to move the test from January to September, but the Government has yet to approve it. It would give parents time to get the results before choosing which school to put on their options list.

Students in Medway will sit this year's exam on a Saturday, possibly in November to allow parents to get the result before making their options.

A council spokesman said: "This can be a nerve-wracking time and our advice to parents is to keep their children calm."

"Give them a good breakfast and arrive at school in plenty of time, so their children can find their friends. Seeing a familiar face can relieve a lot of stress they may be feeling."

EATING certain foods really can help increase brain power, a leading nutritionist has revealed.

The right diet can boost the brain's ability to hold on to information and increase the ability of students to take more on.

And a lot of it is down to giving the body the right fats.

Shelley Davies, a leading nutrition consultant from Bexleyheath, has studied the process for years.

She said: "I firmly believe foods have the ability to increase concentration levels.

"When discussing 'food for the brain', people often think of Omega 3, an essential fat found mainly in oily fish, nuts and seeds.

"It is true that essential fats do increase brain power, as the brain is made up of 60 per cent fat."

Brain

Although essential fats benefit memory, saturated fats found in fried food and red meat should be eaten in moderation because they compete with or cancel out the good fats, she said.

There are also several little-known factors that increase brain power, she said.

Ms Davies said: "Balancing your blood sugar levels can enhance your mood and concentration levels.

"People who suffer mood swings may be unlikely to regulate their sugar levels."

She said it was essential to eat three small meals a day containing protein and 'complex' carbohydrates, such as wholemeal choices and grains.

These should replace 'refined' carbohydrates like white bread, pasta and rice, she said.

She said good snacks for the brain are those made up of protein.

"Neuro-transmitters are responsible for carrying messages to the brain," Ms Davies said. "They are made from amino acids found in protein-rich foods."

Can some foods really improve concentration?

Protein rich foods include meat, poultry, dairy products, fish, soya and quinoa beans and pulses.

"Alcohol and caffeinated drinks should be reduced as they affect mood levels, which may impact on your concentration levels.

"Water increases brain power and aids oxygen intake to your brain. If you feel thirsty, you are already dehydrated – so it's important to keep your hydration levels up," she said.

Her final message was: to raise your brain power, increase your omega 3 intake.

Eat salmon, mackerel, sardines, trout and tuna and cut down on red meat and fried foods.

And drink more water – ditching caffeine and alcohol.

The Tutorial Foundation

At some time, most parents will worry that their child is not doing as well as they could in school. This could be for various reasons, such as difficulty with reading or working independently, struggling to keep up with the class, or perhaps they are bored at school because they seem to be finding the work too easy.

At The Tutorial Foundation, we cater for all children from the age of 5+ to A Level, whether they are struggling in school, sitting entrance examinations for the 10+, 11+, 13+ or other independent school examinations, or are taking GCSE, IGCSE, I.B. or A Level courses.

As well as covering the basic school curriculum, we are also able to help with handwriting and presentation skills, interview technique for entrance examinations or university applications. We can cater for adults who wish to learn English as a Foreign Language and we can also carry out assessments, consultation and tuition for children with Special Educational Needs. For older pupils we can offer tuition for those retaking GCSE and A Levels and we can arrange for those pupils to sit their examinations with us if required as we are a registered as an Examinations Centre for private candidates. Tuition can be arranged on a regular basis or just through the school holidays.

Children from the age of 5+ to GCSE will be assessed first before commencing tuition and tuition can take place daily, weekly or fortnightly depending on the results of the assessment.

SEVEN academy schools have opened in Kent in what the county council calls "a robust approach to failure of schools".

Two more academies are also at the advanced planning stage and have already been approved by the Department for Children, Schools and Families.

KCC also said others are currently being shaped with potential sponsors and discussed with the DCSF.

The council claimed academies provide much-needed capital investment, regardless of location; are a test bed for innovation and are assets to the community that aid social and economic regeneration.

They provide for a broader curriculum; create more ways to study; engage with more parents and invite new ideas and creative approaches to raising standards, said KCC.

A County Hall spokesman said: "Our academies are instilling a pride in and love of learning, motivating students to aim high, become skilled and flexible learners, so that they can become socially, emotionally and behaviourally confident citizens, employees and employers."

"The focus on vocational education provision in our academies – creating the mix of vocational and academic education that hitherto has been missing – provides the range of educational opportunities that these students need to make the most of their talents and abilities."

Partners have helped secure capital investment for secondary schools in the order of £250 million.

KCC said this investment is working to ensure academies transform the school experience, increase student motivation and performance and act as a catalyst for social and economic regeneration in disadvantaged communities.

Cllr Mark Dance, KCC's cabinet member for operations, resources and skills, said: "Kent is drawing on the skills and expertise of its co-sponsors and other partners who each bring a different perspective to the culture, ethos and curriculum of their academy to raise the expectations of young people and their communities.

Academy option to improve the failing schools

"By harnessing the multiplicity of talents of partners, both in and outside the world of education, we are providing a wealth of high quality, complementary, relevant and stimulating learning opportunities that otherwise may not be available."

Sponsors

There are currently early stage talks underway in Medway for the possibly merger of Chapter and Temple schools in Strood with a view to opening one academy.

Academies, first introduced in 2002, have proved to be one of the Government's most divisive education reforms.

They are funded by private sponsors who can give up to £2m and who retain a level of control over the school's ethos and curriculum.

This has proved particularly controversial in the case of academies sponsored by religious groups, such as the evangelical Christian group The Emmanuel Schools Foundation, which runs the Trinity Academy in Doncaster.

Could you teach him how to work out this equation?

UNIVERSITIES in Kent have joined forces to help battle the national shortage of maths teachers.

The University of Kent and Canterbury Christ Church University have developed a course offering a shorter route to a teaching qualification in mathematics.

Nationally, the shortage has been caused in part by the long courses required – trainee teachers have to study their chosen subject for three years and then do a further year's teachers training.

Professor Malcolm Brown, head of the Institute of Mathematics at the University of Kent, said: "Since secondary teaching of maths up to A-level does not require most of the specialised third-year content of a 'standard' maths degree, we have been able to create a single programme that provides a thorough grounding in mathematics and qualified teacher status."

The three-year course will be available to students from September, and successful students will graduate with BSc (Hons) mathematies with secondary education (Qualified Teacher Status).

William Stow, acting head of the Department of Postgraduate Initial Teacher Education at Christ Church added: "The benefit for students is this degree will carry a QTS and a BSc after what is only a three-year programme."

Ireland

John Walder, a semi-retired teacher from Canterbury and local spokesman for the National Union of Teachers, said Kent had particular shortages of physics, mathematics and modern languages teachers.

Researchers at Education Data Surveys (EDS) said it was not just maths teaching that had been affected by long teaching courses.

The most dramatic falls are in physics at 30 per cent, maths and English on 15 per cent, information and communications technology at around 16 per cent and geography coming up at 14 per cent.

Nationally, there are currently only 896 applicants for maths teacher jobs, compared with 1,056 last year and 1,125 in 2006.

The numbers wanting to train as physics teachers dropped from 185 in 2007 to 129.

Professor John Howson, from EDS, said: "Any failure [of trainee teachers to graduate] will impact on schools in the summer of 2009."

Cllr Mark Dance, Kent County Council's cabinet member for education, said: "We are busy increasing the profile of Kent as an employer by attending recruitment fairs across the country, going to schools to encourage pupils into teaching and going to places like Ireland, where there is a surplus rather than a shortage."

On Tuesday, KCC started talks aimed at setting up a strategic alliance with a teacher training college in Ireland to enable Irish trainees to come to Kent schools.

A GROWING number of parents are turning to home tutoring to combat ever-increasing class sizes.

Nearly 100 tutors are now working in Kent for one national company and the industry is booming.

Managing director Mylene Curtis runs Fleet Tutors. She said: "Tutoring works. Class sizes are large in this country.

"A teacher taking a class of 30 or more cannot give adequate attention to the individual needs of every student.

"So, increasingly, a teacher has to use a one-size-fits-all approach. That means those at the bottom end switch off and become difficult to engage and find it hard to grasp the fundamentals.

"Those at the top end become bored and those in the middle just muddle along.

Intensive

She said youngsters can not only be brought up to a certain standard, but those at the top can be allowed to stretch themselves by undergoing more intensive teaching.

"Tutoring is becoming so popular now that we have seen our business quadruple over the past four years," she said.

Ms Curtis said the tutors were local and therefore had a good idea of what was required.

The average fee for an hour's tuition is around £31, depending on the subject, level of the subject, and how much travelling is required.

Ms Curtis said: "Parents are demanding so tutoring will continue to become more popular.

"Education at private schools has increased by around 40 per cent in the last four years.

"Surveys have shown parents would use private education if they could afford to and Parents turning to tutors to tackle one-size-fits-all classroom teaching of course that is very expensive."

She said one reason that tutoring was proving so popular was that spending £400 a term was a lot less for parents than splashing out around £4,000 on private school fees.

"It also enables parents to keep their children at local schools and be able to top up their learning on the side with some private tuition," she explained.

Ms Curtis stressed tutors would never replace schools. She said: "That will never happen – this is supplemental to the classroom.

"We do provide a home education to children who have been ill or been out of the school system for some reason for a term or two.

"Tuition can be used as a transitional measure to get the young person back into school."

Expert tutors, superbly equipped premises and 50 years of experience in the field of education are just three of the reasons why our college is the perfect choice for GCSE and A Level studies. Class sizes are limited to a maximum of six students providing a much more student-centred approach. One-to-one tuition can also be arranged.

Located in a quiet, residential area of Folkestone within walking distance of the train station and the town centre, the College has a brand-new, fully equipped science lab, Wi-Fi Internet, extensive gardens and an excellent cafeteria. Courses start at £150 for 10 hours (2-6 students). Full-time GCSE, A Level and University Foundation courses will also be available from September this year.

KEEPING MIND AND BODY FIT: A balanced diet and regular weekly exercise can help our brains to concentrate and focus on tasks, say fitness experts working in the county

Active bodies mean active minds

FITNESS and exercise can help ensure a healthy mind as well as body, say health clubs.

But getting in shape and being fit is often considered cosmetic by today's standards and people fail to see the connections that a healthy body has on a person's well-being.

Managers at Bannatynes, which has health clubs in Ashford, Broadstairs and Folkestone, say that being fit has as much to do with how the body performs as how it looks.

Learning to maintain health, both physical and mental, is the key to leading a healthy lifestyle, but many people take more care of their cars than they do of their own physical health, said Gordon Jones, general manager of Bannatynes Health Club in Ashford.

He said studies suggest a link, particularly with children, between mental and physical health and successful learning with overall fitness – affecting everything from behaviour to the ability to focus on tasks.

Enjoyable

Physical exercise and mental stimulation improves brain function and actually protects against cognitive decline. The brain is a thinking organ that learns and grows through observation and action.

Mr Jones said: "The body was designed to be active. We are the product of millions of years of evolution, during which we gathered, hunted, ran, climbed and jumped. Many will agree that sitting at a desk all day and then on a settee all evening is not what we were designed for.

"The best, long-term way to be healthy is to have a balanced diet and an adequate level of physical activity. Exercise can be enjoyable and can be easily integrated into your lifestyle. Being motivated and staying motivated is one of the keys to being healthy and maintaining an ability to learn in classrooms."

Kent County Council backs the idea that a fit body can help develop a fit mind. It says pupils should do at least two hours of sport every week and understand the value of healthy eating and exercise, while avoiding smoking and drugs.

The authority says it has fully embraced the Healthy Schools Model, which is jointly funded and supported by the Department for Children, Schools and Families and Department of Health.

Cllr Chris Wells, KCC's cabinet member for children, families and educational standards, said: "The success of the Healthy Schools Programme is testament to the partnership between Kent County Council and Kent NHS, and the enthusiasm of schools around the county. By engaging young people in the benefits of a healthy lifestyle, hopefully this will become second nature to them."

The authority is promoting healthy eating, along with plenty of physical activity and said 62 per cent of its schools meet the Government's Healthy School status. It wants to raise that to 100 per cent in 2009.

County Hall leads the revival of the apprenticeship

AFTER leaving school, many students go on to college or university, but a growing number are now deciding to take up apprenticeships.

This year, 111 young people have started on Kent County Council's Kent Success Programme.

Cllr Mark Dance, KCC's cabinet member for education operations, said: "Working in the public sector is challenging, but hugely rewarding."

"We have seen the benefits of apprenticeships and learned a lot over the last two years."

The authority will provide 250 apprenticeships within KCC and 750 in other public and private sector organisations by 2010.

The programme is aimed at 16 to 19-year-olds who are looking to learn and gain a qualification while they are working and who have shown an interest in starting their career within the public sector.

Of those who started the programme, 52 are still currently studying for their apprenticeship qualification.

And of the 37 who completed their qualification, 16 have remained employed by KCC and a further 14 have found permanent jobs with other public or private sector organisations.

The young people are undertaking apprenticeships in childcare, health and social care, customer service, business and administration and catering.

Key Training Services is currently delivering the training aspects of the Kent Success Programme.

Confidence

The opportunity to earn a wage while learning has also proved a big draw for students.

The students are given a KCC Apprenticeship Contract for the duration of their apprenticeship and are paid £80 per week – the current government minimum for apprentices.

They are helped to build confidence, show assertiveness, and given help with CV writing and interview techniques.

Stefan Ford, 17, an administration trainee apprentice in KCC's policy and resources team, said: "Since I have been on the programme, many of my skills have developed a great deal. I feel that the training service provided by both Key and my work placement has given me a lot of experience and skills that I need for working life."

Juliette Carr, a support services apprentice for Kent Adult Social Services, said: "I feel the Kent Success Programme is a really great opportunity for young people to gain experience and knowledge about the workplace."

Charlotte Harris completed her apprenticeship and is now employed by KCC.

She has qualified for an NVQ Level 2 in business and administration, giving her both office skills and knowledge of the workplace.

The 18-year-old added: "I now have a number of career paths ahead of me, all of which offer amazing opportunities."

"I highly recommend the Kent Success Apprenticeship programme to everyone aged 16 to 19 who would like to learn new skills and gain qualifications at the same time."

Creating staff with the skills employers want

By CHRIS MURPHY
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

FURTHER education is needed to deliver the skills that a successful economy and society requires.

That is the view of the publicly funded Learning and Skills Council, which aims to give every kind of student what they need for success in work and life, whether academic or vocational.

It funds all learning for young people aged 16-19, at colleges, schools and other training providers, giving them the skills and qualifications they need to progress into further learning, including higher education, and employment.

Employers are encouraged to look carefully at the impact a good education can have on their workforce, and the LSC helps companies to recognise the value of skills and invest more in gaining them.

Rob Wye, director of young people's learning and skills at the LSC, said: "It's so important for young people to have choices and there has never been a better time to learn."

"We see the further education system is really delivering in the right way to increase the numbers of young people, particularly those who are more disadvantaged."

PARTNERS: The Learning and Skills Council funds all learning for young people aged 16-19

Apprenticeships are also a major factor for a growing economy.

More than 75 per cent of businesses say they recognise running a good apprenticeship programme will give them an edge over business rivals.

An overwhelming 83 per cent of employers rely on them to provide the skilled workers they need, with two thirds saying they would struggle to fill key positions without apprentice programmes.

The LSC said it is in a good position to spot employment trends and then offer guidance to colleges on what's needed in their geographic areas.

"We understand skills," a spokesman said. "We know where the demand is and where the gaps are. We know where excellent learning and training takes place and we know where there are weaknesses that need to be addressed."

The council said it listens to the needs of local communities and employers and then passes that information back to government.

The spokesman said: "Our strength is our ability to work closely with partners at all levels, connecting the local with the regional and national in a flexible and dynamic partnership."

"We recognise that we are part of a wider system: our relationships with schools, colleges and providers are critical to us – we believe that working together we can deliver more for people and employers."

Stephen Gardner, director of apprenticeships at the Learning and Skills Council, said: "This confirms the significant benefits employers achieve from apprenticeships, from increased competitiveness and overall productivity to improved staff retention and motivation."

"The impressive return on employers' investment shows that apprenticeships are an excellent way to improve the bottom line, helping build the workforce employers need for future success."

Expansion in student numbers and courses

By PHIL REILLY

phil.reilly@kosmedia.co.uk

IN JUST 10 years, Kent universities have experienced a boom in the number of students attending an ever-growing number of courses.

Canterbury Christ Church University has seen student numbers soar from 10,534 in 1998 to almost 15,000 today, and the number of courses has leapt from 800 to 1,200.

Its campuses in Canterbury and Tunbridge Wells have been joined by others in Broadstairs, Medway and Folkestone.

Professor Julia Goodfellow, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Kent, said it is going from strength to strength, while having multiple campuses, including one in Belgium, has been of great benefit.

She said: "The University of Kent now has more than 16,000 students and over 2,000 staff on three major campuses at Canterbury, Medway and Brussels. That is up from 9,904 a decade ago.

"The university has been awarded significant increased student numbers by the Government for the last eight years and it is now within the top third of universities in size, with a turnover of around £140 million last year.

"Our course provision covers a wide range of traditional subject areas, as well as pharmacy, film and drama, sports science, architecture and journalism."

At Greenwich, course numbers have risen from 553 a decade ago to just over 1,000 now, while at its Medway campus they went up from 58 to 161 today. Student levels soared from 18,596 to 30,043 at Greenwich and in Medway from 646 to 5,050.

An investment of more than £20m financed high quality laboratories, lecture facilities, IT facilities and student residences. This is in addition to the shared Universities at Medway development.

Baroness Blackstone, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Greenwich, said: "Medway is a wonderful home for higher education, benefiting from a beautiful campus; the proximity of large businesses, especially in pharmaceuticals and engineering; and outstanding support from our local councils, MPs, schools and colleges.

"Over the last 10 years, the University of Greenwich has demonstrated its commitment to the area: expanding student numbers, creating staff jobs and investing in high quality facilities such as laboratories, lecture theatres and halls of residence.

"University Centre, Folkestone, which opened this year, has a fabulous refurbished building, dynamic links with employers and students hard at work, improving their skills and job prospects.

"I know that higher education will make an important contribution to the regeneration of the town."

It offers degrees in science, engineering business, management and IT, along with pharmacy, jointly with the University of Kent, and nursing and speech and language therapy.

New degrees available for the first time this year include forensic science with criminology, electric and electronic engineering, and sports science with coaching.

IT REALLY is never too late to take up educational classes, with adult education continuing to grow in popularity.

Last year in Medway alone, more than 6,500 people aged 17 to 70 signed up for one or more of the 900 adult education courses on offer. In Medway, all but one per cent said they would recommend their course to a friend.

Lifeline

The largest age group enrolling for courses are in their 30s, followed by people in their 40s.

The most popular courses are in arts and crafts, fitness, literacy and numeracy, and English for people for whom it isn't their first language.

Computer skills for the retired are a growing area of interest. Tuition for literacy, numeracy, GCSE English and GCSE maths is free.

A spokesman said: "There are many reasons why people take up courses – it can be to gain skills for employment, pursue an interest or hobby, keep the brain active or simply to meet people and make new friends.

"For the more elderly, adult education can be a lifeline. It provides a reason for leaving the house, a way of meeting other like-minded people and keeps them healthier in mind and in some cases body.

"Almost 90 per cent of learners complete their study course and more than 85 per cent say they achieved the goals they initially set themselves."

In the rest of Kent, there are over 32,000 enrolled adults on more than 3,500 courses. Another 400 courses are available from September and 90 per cent of last year's A-level students passed their exams.

For those who need to study for a formal qualification, subjects include GCSEs, AS and A-levels in English, maths, critical thinking, philosophy, psychology and sociology, as well as languages, accounting and law and formal certificates needed for work.

Beyond school age, but still wanting to learn? Sign up here

There are also new health and fitness courses, as well as the more unusual, like nail technology, garden design, yoga or thermo-auditory therapy, which works on the reflex points in the ears.

Courses range from one-day sessions to 20-week courses that lead to recognised qualifications.

Ian Forward, head of the Kent Adult Education Service, said: "We all need to keep up the habit of learning, especially in today's fast-changing world.

Fortunate

"Improving skills opens the door to a better paid job, the ability to keep up with our children's education and help them achieve and enjoy learning.

"As we get older, learning helps keep us fit, alert and positive and able to enjoy life more."

Mr Forward added: "We are fortunate in Kent to have one of the largest adult education services in the country and we offer more than 3,500 courses each year.

"We offer a very wide range of subjects to improve qualifications, improve people's basic skills, including computing and IT, plus a wide range of courses for personal interest. We aim to make all learning enjoyable and fun."

ACTIVE: The range of courses on offer to adult learners is vast, and some are even free

IN the people carrier business, Chrysler's Grand Voyager does the business – literally.

It is an established favourite for airport transfers, hotel courtesy vehicles, corporate events and jobs needing a seven-seat taxi with proper luggage space.

That is in addition to being the benchmark 'family holdall'.

There is an all-new version of the car out now and while its boxy bulk – Chrysler argues that it has "clean, tailored lines" – does not sit quite so well on it as its rather more stylish predecessor, it promises to be even better at carting seven people in comfort rather than the 'five+two' manner of most so-called seven-seat rivals.

Chrysler claims to have introduced more than 30 new or improved features and has carried over the simple yet brilliant 'Stow 'n' Go' seating, allowing all five rear seats to fold flat into underfloor lockers that double as luggage space when the seats are in use.

It is currently the market's only MPV with this benefit and it is so simple to use that the Grand Voyager can be converted from seven-passenger MPV to cargo vehicle in less than 30 seconds.

The system is also now offered with a further tweak dubbed, 'Swivel 'n' Go' allowing the second-row seats to rotate 180 degrees to face the third row, with a removable table for use between the two rows.

Furthermore, upmarket Grand Voyager Limited models include a first for the sector: a one-touch power folding third-row seat.

It all adds to what I call the Grand Voyager's 'Thunderbirds effect': the reason young passengers love Grand Voyagers so much is the array of electrical gadgets, from powered side doors and tailgates to DVD players all worthy of the famous gadget-filled TV series.

The latest model features an optional dual-DVD system so second-row passengers can play a game or enjoy a different film to those watching the third row display.

The car also has the Chrysler Group's impressive MyGIG Multimedia Infotainment System with its ability to read and store CDs as well as link with MP3 players – it has a 20Gb hard drive that can store up to approximately 1,600 songs and pictures.

Chrysler's spaceship still a star

Commercial operators, and the more practical of mums and dads, will also be interested to hear that the Chrysler Spaceship now has a six-speed auto gearbox for the 193bhp 3.8-litre

V-6 petrol engine and, the likely best-seller, 163bhp 2.8-litre turbodiesel. New Grand Voyager prices range from £25,995-32,995.

Ford's mad March

FORD is underlining its greater commitment to private car buyers with a big sales drive for March.

So, having spent decades favouring the company car/fleet sector only to find it rather fickle recently as 'user choosers' and their bosses go for more premium offerings, the UK's number one brand is getting better at looking after those who seem to care more about its products.

Indeed, the new Mondeo's all-round excellence has shown that Ford is serious about challenging German premium brands, while flagship versions of the sporting S-Max and Galaxy MPVs have been the biggest sellers.

However, there are also some good cash incentives and 'specials' such as the feature-packed Fiesta Blue from £8,595, while the heavily revised and now more aggressive looking Focus starts at £11,945.

One of the best deals though is the C-Max family holdall in 1.6-litre Zetec form from £14,495 – an £800 saving with free Bluetooth and voice control, privacy glass, front fogs, air con and 'Quickclear' front windscreen.

Twingo's image injection

RENAULT'S latest addition to the Twingo city car range is a prestigious and racy Renaultsport version.

The Twingo Renaultsport 133's 1.6-litre engine is not turbocharged – don't rule it out for later on – and the French marque seems coy about quoting a 0-62mph sprint time, so don't expect any earth-shattering news on that front.

More important perhaps is the potential injection of adrenalin into a fairly sleepy sales performance from the Renault baby; an image model was desperately needed to catch the eye when the car is so much overshadowed by Fiat's new 500.

Renault has also tried to pitch the car as something of a premium buy, but success may yet lie in bargain versions priced to take advantage of lower labour costs at the car's east European production plant.

Skoda draws a green line

SKODA has launched a version of its all-new Fabia supermini officially capable of averaging around 70mpg.

Kent commuters to London by road will also like the fact that CO2 emissions of just 109g/km of CO2 exempt it from the capital's congestion charge.

The 1.4 TDI Fabia GreenLine – £11,490 and £12,140 in hatch and estate form respectively – achieves this miserly feat through aerodynamic panels fitted beneath the chassis, replacement of the spare tyre with a puncture repair kit and raising the front bumper by 35mm.

STEVE LOADERHyundai i10

HYUNDAI has ditched the awful Amica in favour of a slicker city car that looks like a clone of the established Picanto from partner brand Kia.

But appearances can be deceptive; the new i10 differs from the Kia by being 30mm longer, 70mm taller and having a small yet significant extra 10mm of wheelbase.

Climb behind the wheel of the i10 and contrasts with the Kia are even sharper; the Picanto performs adequately for a short car where the trade-off between ride quality and chassis dynamics is always a tough call, but the i10 belongs to a class above.

I found myself quite enjoying a punt along country lanes in the car even though the Hyundai squeezes only an extra horse and a smidgen more urge – 65bhp and 0-62mph in 15.6 seconds – from the same 1.1-litre petrol engine from the Picanto line-up.

Okay, it might sound like I'm easily pleased, but it is a whole lot better than being bounced about in some of the other tin boxes at this end of the market.

Worst hit by its ambition is likely to be the Toyota Aygo/Citroën C1/Peugeot 107 jointly produced model, which looks a bit 'toytown' against the i10's 'proper car' proposition.

The car's interior 'space engineering' is impressive, comfort levels are high, it has a proper tailgate rather than a lifting piece of glass and it comes with five doors as standard.

The interior is also well-arranged and quali-

Hyundai's i10 gets slicker in the city

A LITTLE MOVER: Hyundai's i10 is ideal for cash-strapped drivers with a starting price of £6,495 and five-year/unlimited mileage warranty ty is largely good, although some of the textured trimming looks cheap and the steering wheel feels low rent. The same problem afflicts lower spec i30s and you would have thought that, as the most touched piece of the dashboard, Hyundai could have tried harder.

But that is a small concern when I have not even touched on the big deal for cash-strapped buyers: prices from £6,495, air conditioning as standard, a potential average of 60mpg and Hyundai's worry-free five-year/unlimited mileage warranty.

And while that will be compelling for many people, I also wonder how many will trade up to the £7,595 Style flagship, which delivers electric windows all round, alloys, heated front seats, powered sunroof, underfloor luggage box and rear spoiler.

As Hyundai rightly points out – just 10 years ago that is the kind of equipment list expected of a car costing at least twice the price.

As in the case of Hyundai's impressive Sante Fe 4x4, it is time to forget the badge and just check out the product.

DrivingReview

STEVE LOADERCHIEF DRIVING CORRESPONDENT
steve.loader@kosmedia.co.ukVolvo C30

ALMOST buried within the eclectic mix of Kevin Costner films is Field of Dreams.

Costner's Midwest farmer keeps hearing a voice: "Build it and he will come...", and realises this must mean building a baseball field in the middle of his sweet corn – as you would.

Volvo has shown similar blind faith in its C30 Coupé, a design that has nothing to do with painstaking design committees and customer clinics, but everything to do with a concept car cobbled together to demonstrate Volvo's known prowess in safety.

After hearing voices saying "Build it and they will come...", Volvo chiefs asked for a production design using the same styling cues, but the car's rarity suggests the Swedish marque has not scored a home run like Costner's.

Why? I'm not sure. I like the car's styling, but it divides car lovers as football splits Liverpool or Manchester.

Part of the problem is that Volvo tried to create a coupé – hence the car's 'C' prefix – with hatchback versatility; the C30's squared off rear can be crammed when the seats are folded even if the all-glass tailgate restricts access.

Volvo's dream coupé could divide a nation

More than a few people have moaned to me though that they want a coupé that looks like a coupé, even if the C30 is a bargain in those terms with prices from £14,750.

Then you have the opposite argument from the company car 'user chooser' shopping for a versatile premium hatchback and asking what the C30 can do for them that an Audi A3 cannot – and there's no five-door option either.

By this stage, it sounds a bit forlorn to start quoting the heritage and style of that rakish glass tailgate, echoing the 1970s Volvo 1800ES and 1980s 480ES.

And just when I thought 'er indoors might back this week's test car, she summons up that look I dread and pronounces: "God, that car is ugly."

But I just don't see that and there is the C30 problem – a divided nation.

If only the doubters would get behind the wheel, they would soon realise the Swede has much to recommend it: premium badge, distinctive styling, solid build, some great engines, a good driving experience... and rarity value.

The sensible choice is the 2.0-litre diesel that we tested just after the car's rather protracted launch last year – it has power plus economy – but the 'halo model' is the performance star T5 tested here.

It uses a turbocharged five-cylinder 227bhp 2.5-litre Volvo unit that, much to the irritation of Volvo dealers, has been lauded more for being in the Ford Focus ST hot hatch.

But Volvo's parent did at least donate the excellent Focus platform to the C30 in return.

The combination is impressive: the C30 T5 will sprint from 0-60mph in 6.2 seconds and maximum pulling power comes in from low down at 1,500rpm and right up to 5,000 – easily exploited through a crisp six-speed 'box and pin sharp steering.

The front wheels can be made to scabble with that much power, but the T5 is hardly rowdy. The car's level of grip is mostly beyond criticism and it will eat up rural miles while cruising with refinement on the motorway and being a joy around town.

Of course, fuel consumption is not too PC if you exploit the performance and I found the official 'combined' figure of 32.5mpg fairly laughable, but I cannot think of another coupé that drives as well and comes with some hatchback versatility.

The large glazed area at the rear throws masses of light into the car and suggests that you are driving a bigger and airier vehicle.

The quality of the interior, seats and dashboard layout is impressive and the 'floating' centre console – now a Volvo trademark – enhances 'big car' feel.

However, the boot is smaller than obvious sports hatch rivals and has a fiddly load cover and just two rear seats.

Then again, those two seats are better than those in most rival coupés and recognises something that hot hatchback rivals shy away from: claiming to accommodate three across 'Never have universities and colleges been more important'

By TONY PATEY

tony.patey@kosmedia.co.uk

FURTHER and higher education – especially in Kent – has a major opportunity to grasp the new “university challenge” of getting business involved in shaping courses.

John Denham, Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills, is so keen to highlight this area as a shining example of an education-business growth node, he chose it as the backdrop to reveal a new UK-wide initiative.

He unveiled plans for a huge expansion of higher education in the UK, creating 20 or more new campuses over the next six years at a cost of £150 million and providing study places for up to 10,000 additional students.

Many of the campuses are to be based in areas of high unemployment which are in need of regeneration, meaning that university growth will be vital to the strengthening of regional economies and the provision of highly skilled workers.

And he said Universities at Medway – in the centre of the Thames Gateway growth area – is a shining example of how higher education can help transform a region's economy and workforce.

Mr Denham was in Medway on Monday for a tour of the campus at Chatham Maritime, which is shared between the universities of Greenwich, Kent and Canterbury Christ Church, plus Mid Kent College.

He said: “Universities at Medway shows us just how many people, of all ages, have been able to retrain and develop their talents – proving that if the opportunity for education exists, there is no limit to what can be achieved.

“Never have universities and colleges been more important to our country – both nationally, in ensuring our success on the world stage, and locally, through the creation of jobs and new skills, driving regeneration and enriching cultural life.”

Mr Denham's visit came as local and national initiatives were unveiled in the wake of trying to plug vital skills gaps and getting businesses more involved in post-secondary education.

Enterprise hub cuts mustard with Dijon visitors

A HIGH-level fact-finding delegation from Burgundy in France visited the Sittingbourne Enterprise Hub (SEH) based at Kent Science Park (KSP) recently as part of a tour of top European business centres.

A research and development hub, known in France as a Technopole, focusing on helping agricultural and environment technology companies is planned for Dijon, and Burgundy's senior economic development leaders came to Kent to see how it can be achieved.

The four-strong delegation, led by Jacques Brossier, senior project manager for the new technopole, was eager to visit the hub – part of the SEEDA-sponsored regional business support network – after Dr John Dodd, director of the Sittingbourne Enterprise Hub, visited Dijon.

Mr Brossier said: “Dr Dodd's recent visit to Dijon helped stimulate the development of the concept of the new Technopole. Our return trip was an opportunity to learn more about Kent's experience in growing technology companies.”

“Kent has a similar agenda for encouraging agro-industrial and environmental technologies and the meeting was an opportunity to learn from each other.”

The French delegation was joined by representatives from SEEDA, Business Link Kent (Sustainability), Medway Enterprise Hub, Food Enterprise Hub and SEH/KSP.

Dr Dodd said: “The French team was particularly impressed with the range of support on offer to growing businesses and how that integrates well on small and large science parks or incubators in Kent and beyond.”

James Speck, site director at Kent Science Park, added: “This event has successfully built upon the strong cross-Channel relations between Kent and other regions in France and further collaboration is envisaged.”

BUSINESS BRIEFSDesigner adds zest to popular gastro pub

DESIGNER Lynne Pearce, who specialises in major events, including celebrity bashes for A list celebs, has just helped with a refurbishment of The Lime Tree on the Square at Lenham.

The Lime Tree, which dates back to the 14th century, has launched its recently renovated hotel rooms, to complement its already well established and popular restaurant.

Head chef and co-owner Steve Feigenspan said: "The restaurant has won a number of awards and this is an area we will consider in the future. However, for now we have opted to let the food speak for itself."

Unannounced tax team visits cancelled

CHARTERED accountants and business advisors, Baker Tilly, reports that the tax people have effectively backed down from a proposal for unannounced home visits by the tax team.

The firm, which has branches in Tunbridge Wells and Bromley, says such visits will now not be possible without the taxpayer's consent, unless the home is also used for business purposes, in which case access will only be permitted to the business part of the property, such as the office.

A £5 MILLION cash package from a leading bank has helped an Erith company gear up to meet growing demand in Europe.

Allied Hygiene Group, a South East manufacturer and distributor of hygiene wipes, has bought new premises in Erith for £4.88m with the support from NatWest Commercial Banking's Thames Gateway team.

Director Mark Blackhall told KoS that the new three acre-site for manufacturing and storing in Centurian Way would help accommodate the firm's growth in the UK and the rest of Europe.

When formed in 1986, Allied Hygiene had just a small warehouse in Dartford and supplied commercial and industrial companies with janitorial supplies and washroom disposables.

Today, the company is a £25 million concern and has expanded to manufacturing and distributing paper and hygiene wipes to a nationwide network of distributors.

Tony Knowles, associate director at NatWest Commercial Banking in Thames Gateway said: "Allied Hygiene Group's growth over the past years has been extremely impressive.

"The business is a market leader in its industry and with the UK and Europe presenting further opportunities to support its continued growth. I am pleased to have assisted the management team with their latest acquisition and wish them well with their new premises at Erith."

The renovation game

Tax and planning changes make job easier

By TONY PATEYtony.patey@kosmedia.co.uk

NOW is the best time ever for people building their own homes or renovating – associated VAT has been cut and planning rules have been relaxed.

BuildStore, which claims to be the country's leading self build and renovation specialist, says Kent has always attracted self builders and people wanting to convert barns and oast houses – and now things are much easier and the marketplace is better catered for.

And, of course, self builders pay stamp duty on only the cost of the plot of land, not on the building costs – which can save literally tens of thousands.

Following the recent relaxing of planning permission rules in the Government's Planning Reform Bill, VAT on the cost of works and materials used to renovate properties that have been empty for a minimum of two years has been cut from 17.5 per cent to just five per cent.

Previously, this discount only applied to properties unoccupied for three years or longer.

A BuildStore spokeswoman said: "This is a further incentive for people considering doing up a substandard property, whether to create their own des-res, or for would-be landlords or developers looking to make a profit.

"And with a greater choice of mortgages geared specifically to people carrying out renovations, BuildStore is expecting a huge take-up.

"There are several obvious attractions to self building or renovating a substandard property. One is that for those worried about the spectre of negative equity, a way of avoiding this trap is to make sure that your home costs considerably less to buy than its estimated final value.

"Home owners going this route, typically make between 25 and 35 per cent profit just by finishing the project."

BuildStore recently launched its competitively-priced Intelligent Finance two-year fixed offset mortgage, for people who are renovating a tired and dated property, or carrying out improvements on their existing home.

This latest incentive for homebuyers could help thousands of people to secure a home they want at a price they can afford.

John Hay, head of financial services marketing, said: "The Government is finally addressing the acute housing shortage and initiatives like the Planning Reform Bill and the reduction of VAT on properties empty for two years will pave the way for a significant number of people to find homes. It all adds up to a very attractive picture for renovators."

Renovation opportunities, the vast majority of them empty, can be found on BuildStore's online database, www.plotsearch.co.uk.

BuildStore's Self Build & Renovation Show is being held at the National Self Build & Renovation Centre in Swindon until today.

BuildStore can be contacted on 0870 870 9991 or send an email to the address, enquiries@buildstore.co.uk.

COMMUNITY, health and environmental groups and organisations across Kent can purchase new IT equipment and training thanks to the Pfizer £25,000 Computers for the Community Fund.

The world's largest research-based pharmaceutical company has made IT grants to 26 Kent community groups including Dover Cruise Bereavement Service, the Shaw Trust, Sandwich District Guides Association, East Kent Mencap, Folkestone Youth Project, Medway Health Action Charity and the Thanet Voluntary and Community Forum.

The grants were made by the company from a fund set up to mark the approval for its new HIV medicine, Celsentriq (maraviroc), developed at the Pfizer European Research and Development HQ at Sandwich.

The fund also presented a £1,000 grant to Kent Search and Rescue which provides countywide support for emergency services and local councils tracing Kent people who have been reported missing.

The £25,000 grant funding was made available by recycling redundant IT equipment at the healthcare company's Kent research and development centre.

Mobile operator in sync with emerging markets

By TONY PATEYtony.patey@kosmedia.co.uk

SYNCHRONICA plc, international provider of mobile email and synchronization services, has raised an additional £2 million to further fund a strong sales pipeline in emerging markets.

This latest placing of new shares, to institutional and private investors, is in addition to an investment by Lanstead Capital CP in January and brings new money pumped into the company already this year to £3.9m.

Expand

The extra capital will be used primarily to expand the Tunbridge Wells-based firm's sales and support functions in emerging markets including Middle East, Africa, Asia and Latin America.

The Tunbridge Wells-based firm – featured in the KOS Media Business in February – has just done a deal with Miami-based Brightstar Corp to promote Synchronica's award-winning mobile push email and synchronization technology Mobile Gateway across six continents.

Mobile Gateway 3.5 works with more than three billion of the phones in use around the world today – both Smartphones and mass-market devices – making it ideal for emerging markets where low-cost handsets represent the vast majority of devices.

The firm's Mobile Backup, which offers a backup and restore service for personal information stored on devices, is also ideal for these emerging markets because the mobile phone is increasingly becoming the primary tool of choice for social and business contact information in these areas.

Information specialist Informa predicts there will be 4.81 billion mobile phone subscribers by 2012, with most of the next billion subscribers coming from emerging markets, where PC and fixed-line penetration is low and consumers rely on their mobile phones for communication.

Carsten Brinkschulte, Synchronica's chief executive officer, said: "This new round of funding allows us to continue to strengthen our efforts in emerging markets. We have a robust pipeline of prospects in these regions and a first-rate solution that truly offers mobile email for everyone, regardless of which phone they use."

"With these funds, and our recent strategic partnership with Brightstar, we are well positioned to offer mobile operators a 'Blackberry for the rest of us'."

Apart from headquarters in Kent, the firm has a development centre in Germany and presences in the USA, Hong Kong, and Dubai. It is a company traded on the AIM (Alternative Investment Market) list, a sub-market of the London Stock Exchange.

Charity gives homeless chance to work

HOMELESSNESS and business aren't usually linked together, but bring in ex-hostage Terry Waite and a vision for the Medway area and they make sense.

Mr Waite is UK boss of the Emmaus charity, the national umbrella organisation of the worldwide movement, and a new community is on the cards for the area.

Its objective is to get the group up to break-even point within three years of opening.

Emmaus runs special communities for homeless people who, when they join, become 'companions' and stop claiming income support and instead work full-time in the group's business.

They learn new skills and get work experience and in turn this gives them renewed self-respect and dignity.

The embryo Medway Community was launched by Mr Waite last year and has just drawn up budgets and a business plan detailing action strategies. The aim is to be a net contributor to the local economy with an annual turnover of £300,000.

The community would be self-supporting primarily collecting, refurbishing and selling donated furniture and household goods – but they are choosy because they have to sell on. It's a business.

Its recycling operations fit in well with local and national targets and reduce landfill waste. It is also helping homeless people get back on their feet, offering permanent accommodation and work.

People become homeless for a range of reasons – meet 30 homeless people and you'll get 30 different reasons.

Medway's trustees are now looking for a suitable site for the community and to raise the necessary funds – they are also seeking a shop, and are about to set up an office thanks to local firm, mhs homes.

There are other organisations catering for the homeless in the area – such as Ashdown Medway Accommodation Trust, Hope Kent and The Cyrenians – but there is still a big need for help, and Emmaus offers a different approach.

Contact Emmaus Medway, PO Box 533, Rochester ME1 9AW, or emmausmedway@gmail.com.

Companies struggling to keep up with green issues

By TONY PATEYtony.patey@kosmedia.co.uk

FOUR out of five senior UK executives say climate change is a significant business issue, but the same number admit they don't have a strategy in place to fight it.

Latest research by YouGovStone, on behalf of KPMG Carbon Advisory Group, reveals many business leaders are struggling with the issue – 77 per cent said it will grow in importance – but they are at odds how to tackle it.

Impact

However, two out of five executives claimed to have a good understanding of the impact of climate change on their organisation, and a further 17 per cent know their organisation's carbon footprint and have a clear strategy in place.

But less than one in ten (seven per cent) knew the UK had committed to cut 60 per cent of green house gas emissions by 2050. Latest Government figures showed that carbon emissions fell just 0.1 per cent in 2006, highlighting the size of the challenge facing everyone.

The results also revealed that an increasing number of UK executives did not think the Government was doing enough to educate business on how to tackle climate change. In the last six months this view jumped from 42 per cent to 58 per cent.

But results revealed that climate change hadn't made it onto the board agenda of a third of those questioned and a fifth stated it was not likely to become something discussed at board level in the near future.

Adrian Wilcox, partner for KPMG's Carbon Advisory Group in the South East, said: "By taking simple steps and gathering basic energy and emissions data, a business is less likely to be caught out by legislation when it does come, and they could be cutting wastage and energy bills in the meantime."

Nearly three quarters agree that education to increase awareness amongst businesses is the key to combating climate change.

Mr Wilcox said: "Anyone who asked an executive about last quarter's turnover or profit would expect a quick and accurate response.

"Knowing your carbon number is rapidly becoming a key performance indicator that employees, regulators and shareholders demand accuracy and assurances on."

When asked about the challenges around implementing carbon management strategies, getting buy in from employees is the biggest hurdle according to a quarter, closely followed by influencing partners and suppliers to adopt more carbon efficient practices.

However, three quarters of businesses are recycling or using recycled products, two out of three are using energy efficient appliances, and more than a half claim to be educating their employees about environmentally friendly business practices.

Celebrating young apprentices

NATIONAL Apprenticeship Week was held last week, celebrating programmes across the country and encouraging more businesses, organisations and young people to take up a variety of opportunities.

Kent County Council, which runs its own apprenticeship programme, is hoping to get the rest of the county's public sector linked into the scheme and initial discussions have taken place with district councils and Kent Police.

Later this year the programme will be rolled out to private sector employers across Kent. They will be able to find out about the programme and the benefits apprentices can bring to their organisation, also ensuring that the young people of Kent have the right opportunities to reach their potential.

Within KCC 111 young people have started on the Kent Success Programme – part of KCC's Kent Apprenticeship Programme.

It is aimed at 16 to 19-year-olds who want to gain a qualification while they are working and who have shown an interest in starting their career within the public sector. They are undertaking apprenticeships in childcare, health and social care, customer service, business and administration and catering.

Young people are given a KCC Apprenticeship Contract for the duration of their term and are paid £80 per week, the current Government minimum for apprentices.

The busy life of a shy lord

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mention top Kent attractions such as Bewl Water, The Hop Farm and Lamberhurst Vineyard and the name Simon Hume-Kendall is not far away as one of the main drivers of their success. He is a local businessman with the emphasis on the local – his main aim since giving up some real high-flying in the City – but he has a portfolio which any blue chip firm would give its back teeth for.

Q How do you relax?

A I don't – ever. I have too much fun with my family, friends and business. I also enjoy sport and am a Crystal Palace and England football fan, which can hardly be described as relaxing. My other great passion is fishing which I do regularly at Bewl Water and elsewhere around the world.

Q What future projects have you got on the drawing board?

A Obviously the upgrading of The Hop Farm, Bewl Water and our other major developments in Kent are our principal focus. I am also in the process of developing a large diamond concession we own in West Africa. We are also purchasing another large agricultural estate in the county to extend the production of food and wines.

Q What's the latest with The Hume-Kendall Foundation?

A I set up the foundation with Desmond Wilcox more than 19 years ago. It is privately funded and provides bursaries for children whose parents die whilst they are at school. It has also supported schools with the building and purchasing of new capital assets and infrastructure projects. We've also recently agreed to act as private sponsor for Tunbridge Wells High School's bid to obtain special status as a business school centre of excellence. This is the only area in which I use my title Lord Aldeburgh.

APART from the attractions already mentioned, Simon Hume-Kendall has a spread ranging from The Swan at Lamberhurst to Smart & Simple Hotels in Tunbridge Wells, not to mention being the chairman of trustees of Clydesdale Bank (Kent & Surrey), and the Tunbridge Wells Conservatives.

Mr Hume-Kendall is also the Lord of Aldeburgh, although he doesn't use the title nor exercise any of his powers on his land in Suffolk, apart from, as you will read later, one aspect.

Locally born and bred, he went to school at Holmewood House at Langton Green. His father, a gold medal Commonwealth Games swimming champion, died when he was just 14 and his younger brothers 12 and seven. All went on to be great achievers.

Here, the man who says his greatest achievement is his family, talks to KOS Media:

Q Why did you go to Lloyds after studying history at Kings College, London?

A I went to Lloyds as I was always interested in becoming a ship owner and was offered a job to join the Sedgwick Group, the then largest Marine Insurance Broker. That gave me entrée into the ship-owning business, where I met the famous Kendall Chen, who has since become the largest gas tanker owner in the world. Kendall became my best friend and was also best man at my wedding in 1977.

Q What made you cut ties with big business when you bought Lamberhurst Vineyard?

A I didn't cut ties, I merely retired from my international executive duties. With three young children growing up, I knew I would barely see them if I continued with my travel schedule, which involved being away for at least six months a year.

I still have interests in shipping, banking, construction and the media, and have since localised my executive responsibilities. At this time I remain ambassador to Clydesdale Bank, Kent, and chairman of Sport Media Group Plc, as well as chairing and sitting on the board of a number of organisations.

Q How did the English Wine Group come about?

A We bought Lamberhurst Vineyard after it had gone into bankruptcy. It was founded by Kenneth McAlpine, who then sold it to a local builder. Our first step was to employ Frazer Thompson, who we were lucky to persuade to join us as MD as he was one of Heineken's youngest directors.

We then took English Wines Plc to the public in 2003 and raised a further £2 million for the business.

In 2004 we brought in Nigel Ray and Richard Balfour-Lynn – bosses of such esteemed enterprises as Hotel Du Vin, Domino's Pizza, Liberty's, Saracen's Rugby Club and The Trocadero – who together invested a further £2m. I have retired from English Wine's board and left it in their capable hands, but we have retained a significant interest in the company.

Interest in Kings Hill to get bigger

By TONY PATEY

tony.patey@kosmedia.co.uk

HIGH levels of interest mean that 2008 could easily follow a great 2007 for Kings Hill developer Liberty Property Trust UK.

The firm reports that around 80,000 sq ft of property transactions have been completed on the business park.

Major deals include the completion of a 43,717sq ft build-to-suit headquarters for Cabot Financial (Europe) Ltd, and the leasing of 13,659sq ft to conveyancing search service SearchFlow.

Interest

The majority of space in the new, speculative office building 42 Kings Hill Avenue has been let and there has been a high level of lease renewals and assignments. A further 75,000sq ft is currently under negotiation.

"2007 was a good year for Kings Hill and, judging by the level of interest we are receiving from companies wanting to move here, this year should be an exciting one too," said Andrew Blevins, managing director of Liberty Property Trust UK.

"Our flexibility means we can accommodate

NEARING CAPACITY: Most of the office space at 42 Kings Hill building has been leased businesses as their needs change, as demonstrated by building brand new offices for Cabot when it outgrew its existing space here."

Kings Hill's success is borne out by recent research from Knight Frank that the south east sector of the M25 corridor has the lowest vacancy rate of the whole region.

Much of the vacant space at Kings Hill is a result of occupiers moving elsewhere on the park.

Current availability includes 20,600 sq ft in the new, speculative building 42 Kings Hill Avenue; 18,000 sq ft recently vacated by Cabot in the Flex building, 10 Kings Hill Avenue; 14,414 sq ft in the office village and 4,644 sq ft in headquarters building, 30 Tower View.

Around 100 businesses, ranging from international and national corporates to small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), are based at Kings Hill, employing a total of 5,000.

As well as a business park, Kings Hill is a thriving community, with around 4,000 people living in the residential village. One in seven Kings Hill households has a person employed by one of the companies located there.

There is a good range of shops, restaurants, a pub and coffee shop in Liberty Square, together with usual high street amenities such as a dry cleaners, post 'n' packing warehouse, florist, hairdressers, chemist, gallery and gift shop, opticians, dentist, vet, estate agents and recruitment agency which serve both the business and residential communities at Kings Hill.

A 90,000 sq ft David Lloyd Leisure racquets, health and fitness club opened in 2006 and there is also an 18-hole PGA golf course, a day nursery and University of Greenwich conference centre.

American-owned Liberty says the US inspired concept at Kings Hill aims to promote quality of life and provide a unique environment in which people can live, work, play and study.

Knight Frank, CB Richard Ellis and Altus Edwin-Hill are the agents for Kings Hill. For more information on Kings Hill visit www.kings-hill.com.

Anyone interested in finding out more about available space should contact Caroline Binns, associate director, marketing & leasing, on 01732 223 426.

The first occupant is welcomed at centre

RECENTLY completed Glenmore Centre on Orbital Park Ashford has welcomed the first occupier to move in.

Global Technical Ltd which was based in Gravesend has moved its operation to Ashford having searched the area.

Atrium Chartered Surveyors, which negotiated the deal for owners Glenmore Commercial Estates Limited, said it was pleased to have the first occupier on the estate so soon after completion.

It said it was also in negotiation with other potential occupiers. Atrium said it was sure the new units would prove a great success.

How to impress prospective employers

By TONY PATEY

tony.patey@kosmedia.co.uk

IT'S GETTING hot if you try to be too cool before applying for a job, according to experts.

They say online social networking and too-casual clothes could spell disaster – and even put the mockers on a promotion.

We all know that wearing jeans and comedy ties to job interviews mean you might as well not bother, but bosses also notice these things when looking at promotion prospects.

And employers are only a few clicks away from finding out from Facebook and MySpace what you did the weekend before you go for an interview, and when thinking if you are suitable to go up the career ladder.

According to a survey by Reed Employment, which has a number of branches in Kent, jeans and comedy ties are definitely banned from most offices, and nearly a half of workers wear at least smart casual every day.

Two out of every five wear formal office attire such as suits, and the majority of people questioned felt that dressing smartly will advance their careers, with 51 per cent believing it will help them win a promotion.

Office workers seemed to like their work uniforms – 37 per cent ticked the box – believing it created a separation from their office and home lives. The same proportion said they felt proud to wear a uniform as it represented their company's brand image.

Only 16 per cent stated they are unaffected by what they wear to work, and just one per cent said they felt uncomfortable in their work clothing.

We are not a rebellious lot either – 90 per cent of respondents said they strictly adhere to their work dress codes every day. However, some casual elements have crept into work dress codes – wearing a tie is no longer the norm in most offices, with 61 per cent of men stating they never wear ties, 20 per cent wear a tie only for business meetings, with only one per cent wearing one every day.

'Dress down Fridays' are popular and a third of respondents claimed their company had a policy in place to allow more casual wear on Fridays.

But putting your personal life on view on the internet could be either damaging or positive, depending on how you project yourself. Badenoch & Clark, an international consultancy, said it was routine for recruiters to check out social networking sites.

Two thirds said the information they found there influenced a recruitment decision, and a quarter said they had changed their minds and decided not to hire someone because of what they had found out.

Andy Powell, a director at the firm, said: "More employers are taking note of 'net reputation' so it is right to be a bit careful. But at its best, a good profile page can show a broad network of friends and interests, creativity and good internet skills."

a unique record

On May 28th, 1983, thirteen members of the Aldington Prison Officers' Social Club, Kent completed the World Record for the longest 24-Hour bathtub sail. They paddled the bathtub on still water a whopping 145.6 km (90.5 miles).

Like the members of the Aldington Prison Officers' Social Club, we hold a unique record for ensuring that every single client receives the very best advice, support and quality of work, no matter what their background, tailored to their specific needs. Unlike the intrepid bathtub sailors, we always keep our feet firmly on dry land and promise not to set you off up the creek without a paddle.

UNIVERSITY of Kent's new business IT Clinic at its Medway campus provides high-quality, low-cost support, and training and consultancy to small and medium-sized enterprises across the county.

The clinic is a unique set-up, as all its consultants are undergraduate computing students at the university, whose work is mentored and supervised by experienced co-ordinators.

Many of the students – who can also advise on computer troubleshooting, mobile phone development and website management – have gained industrial and consulting experience through placements at major organisations including IBM, Microsoft and Lehman Brothers.

The work also forms an essential part of their final degree programmes. The clinic was recently-awarded Technology Enterprise Kent's Enterprise and Training Award for Excellence.

Students from the clinic have also helped the Medway Learning Partnership develop a new website aimed at adult learners, and have run a series of workshops in Rochester aimed at helping businesses make the most of their IT and internet facilities.

BEEN there, done it – got the qualification. Seven employees of Queenborough's Aesica pharmaceutical company have now got certificates to show they successfully completed a two-week course in health and safety.

All qualified workers are now facilitators within their departments – chemical operations, warehousing, packaging, engineering, manufacturing and quality control. Our picture shows the

LEADING regional law firm Thomson Snell & Passmore has continued to expand its private client group by welcoming Martin Terrell (pictured) as a partner to the firm.

Mr Terrell has expertise in Court of Protection and specialises in the fields of probate and elderly client work. Having read law at Durham University and qualified in 1991, he is a well-known author on the Court of Protection and mental capacity.

He has lectured and written on Court of Protection and elderly client matters, especially for Elderly Client Adviser; he is the author of A Practitioner's Guide to the Court of Protection (Tottel) and a joint editor and contributor to the Law Society's Elderly Client Handbook.

Mr Terrell is also joint vice chairman of Solicitors for the Elderly and a member of the Society of Trust & Estate Practitioners. He has also acted as a panel receiver (deputy) for the Court of Protection and was a member of the former Public Guardianship Office Professional Receiver's Forum.

Thomson Snell & Passmore is a regional law firm with 35 partners and more than 200 staff at its offices in Tunbridge Wells and the Thames Gateway.

Companies pay price for illness

EMPLOYEE sickness costs business an average of £600 per year per employee – a staggering figure.

Now, following a recent trial by two Marden-based companies – refuse vehicle manufacturer Scarab and Water (for Work and Home), the home and office water supplier – businesses are being urged to provide instant health checks for their workers for just £30 per head.

The health checks come courtesy of a new so-called Water Wellpoint, a free-standing kiosk that discreetly checks weight, heart rate, blood pressure, body mass index, body fat content and hydration quota in about five minutes.

The check provides a personal print out of the results along with a confidential company employee health report.

Ben McGannan, managing director of Marden based Water (for Work and Home) said: "With employee wellbeing moving up the corporate agenda fast, and after all the indulgences of Christmas, now is the perfect time to initiate an exercise like this."

"As Stephen Bevan, director of research at the Work Foundation Think Tank, recently said, 'Organisation culture has to change to promote better wellbeing rather than continuing to adopt a reactive approach to sickness'."

The health check is appropriate for all staff – from the factory floor to the board room – and Water (for Work and Home) will deliver and set up the kiosk, attend it throughout the day and provide supporting literature, helping employees to make their own health improvement decisions.

Mr McGannan continued: "Clearly prevention is better than cure and employers can benefit from adopting an employee wellbeing programme in a number of ways, from improved staff retention, attendance and productivity, to reductions in recruitment and health insurance costs."

Home-grown talent

HOME COMFORTS: Dover have relied on bringing through home-grown talent rather than relying on overseas players

The danger of relying on overseas players

By PETER BILLS

THE issue of overseas players used in rugby teams continues to be an area of controversy for Kent clubs.

The subject is assuming a growing importance, even down to levels such as London 3 South East, as some clubs field as many as six or seven foreign players.

Lordswood Rugby Club president and secretary Sam Wellings admits clubs like his are working at a decided disadvantage.

"Some teams we play have six or seven lads from countries like New Zealand, Australia, Samoa and especially South Africa," he said.

Financial

"But the trouble is, it makes life very difficult for those of us who can't compete at that financial level. It is becoming quite a problem and I imagine it will continue because, for some reason, the RFU doesn't regard South Africans as overseas players."

Elsewhere in Kent there is similar concern.

Dover chairman Richard Catt said: "We have certainly noticed a growing number of these guys, from Nigerians to Samoans to South Africans and a few New Zealanders. A lot of people hold great store in recruiting these guys to get instant success but, to me, it doesn't mean they are necessarily better players than we are producing."

"I'm not saying they are no good but, personally, I'm happy that we have brought almost all our players through ourselves. We started a development squad five or six years ago and brought the average age of the 1st XV down from 34 to 23. A lot of these guys also haven't reached their peak yet, so we may have good times ahead.

"By bringing in three or four overseas players I don't believe you can create the same club unity. You might have a flash of success for a few games but then they move on and where does that leave you? You have disrupted parts of your club by bringing them in."

Bexley Rugby Club, who play in Kent League 2, included a number of South Africans in their side three years ago. Although they helped improve performances on the pitch, there is also a downside to their inclusion.

Secretary Sara Robinson said: "The trouble is, they pull you up and then disappear. However, I would say sometimes these guys bring quite a lot to a club. The South Africans we had were very motivated, very keen and very competitive. It boosted the rest of the boys and taught us quite a bit."

"Socially they were great, too, but when they go they do leave a gaping hole."

At Lordswood, moreover, they are trying to stick to their original creed for the club, set out when it was formed in 1983. "We don't mind one or two foreign players coming in but the original idea was that local people should enjoy the club and become associated with it," added Wellings.

"Obviously it has got more serious and competitive than that over the years. But we still want local lads to come and enjoy it. I would certainly prefer mainly home-grown players because they must be more passionate about the club than a guy coming in from the southern hemisphere for three months and then moving on."

NEW BLOOD: Fleet boss Liam Daish wants loan signings to cope with fixture congestion

Daish looks to freshen squad for play-off push

EBBSFLEET United manager Liam Daish is hoping to bolster his squad with loan signings in a bid to cope with a fixture-packed month.

The club are still fighting on two fronts as they hope to gain promotion to the football league for the first time in the club's history via the play-offs, while a first Wembley appearance via the FA Trophy remains a possibility.

Reaching the two-legged Trophy semi-final has caused a fixture pile-up, with nine games scheduled for March. The Fleet are nine points adrift of the top five, but with two games in hand they are still in contention to make the play-offs.

And Daish believes his side are in need of new faces after playing 43 games so far this season. This week he has been scouring the divisions to attract new recruits to Stonebridge Road.

Daish told KoS: "I will beg, steal and borrow just to try and get some players in, but it is easier said than done. I will continue to try but we do need a boost."

Next week his side face three games in the space of eight days, with encounters against Rushden & Diamonds, Aldershot Town followed by fellow play-off rivals Histon.

Young Canterbury are reaping rewards

With CATHY-GILLIAT SMITH

So here we go again. After a pretty disjointed first half of the season, with players coming and going and a mixture of results, we began the England Slazenger Hockey League with a renewed energy and determination to display what Canterbury Ladies are all about.

A fruitful combination of youth and experience, our performances have shown good passing and tempo which means our title ambitions should not be written off yet.

The quality I admire most about Canterbury Ladies is the competition and determination the younger players coming through have for establishing their places in the first team. To play in the top league week in, week out against top players – who wouldn't want to be working their socks off to show they can compete up there too?

Although the current Great Britain squad aren't playing in the league this season, there are still a number of ex-internationals to deal with. Jane Smith and Tina Cullen continue to show their talent as the leading scorers of the league, despite having retired from the international scene and being in their mid-30s.

Local schoolgirl, Jenna Wiles, has come on leaps and bounds over the last few months and now regularly provides the team with a composed and exciting right half who is often seen up in the attacking third delivering passes in to the circle. Likewise, 18-year-old Sarah Kerly has been working hard and has found excellent finishing touches on a number of occasions this season.

Mid-season transfer Helen Grant has immediately impacted on the team as she netted twice on her debut at Polo Farm and then once more against Chelmsford. Helen is recovering from a knee-injury that kept her out of last summer's European Cup where England qualified for Beijing. With over 100 caps for England and Great Britain it was the least Helen could do for her new club. Currently a reserve for the GB squad Helen is hoping to get some quality pitch time under her belt.

Speaking of internationals, GB players Mel Clewlow and Hayley Brown have returned from Australia where they unfortunately were whitewashed during the Test series. The tournament was a build-up to Beijing later this year and I am sure they will have gained from the experience.

As a team we have adjusted well to their absence and it has given opportunity to a number of new signings to step up to the mark. Both Kirsty Chapman (signed from Maidstone) and Jo Bryant (Woking) have been great additions to the team both on and off the pitch.

With Mel away and not long until the end of the season, the coaching role has fallen to Jen Wilson, one of South Africa's international stars who is also aiming to feature highly in this summer's Olympics. A truly charismatic player, Jen leads by example and her determination on the field never fails to inspire the team.

Young internationals Susannah Townsend, Tash Brennan and Nat Seymour also continue to provide the team with solid performances.

Grace Baldson, who is only 15-years-old and recently represented England U16 Girls against Ireland, is still too young to compete in the National League. We are counting the days until Grace is old enough to join us on a Saturday.

And what about me right now? Well, obviously I am still disappointed to go to Australia with Mel and Hayley, but it has made me realise how lucky I am to be at Canterbury where I can still train with quality players and really enjoy playing.

I am still working very hard on all aspects of training as, being a reserve, you could get called back in at any time and you need to be ready if the opportunity comes along.

I was looking back at some photos from the Commonwealth Games two years ago and with the memories I have of that experience, I would do anything to be part of the team that goes to Beijing.

YOUNG GUNS: Canterbury's Cathy Gilliat-Smith (above) has been impressed with the squad's younger players, who have stepped up in the absence of the team's international players this season

Until final squad selection in mid-June, anything can happen so I am just making sure I am fully prepared and ready should I get a chance. Selection is inevitably partly subjective and a lot of different areas are taken into consideration. It's not as easy as simply having the quickest time for something and therefore getting picked.

But for the moment I am delighted to be part of a fantastic team who, now we've started to settle down somewhat, are beginning to look like a real force for the future...

Stimson adds 'leader' Maher to ease drop fears

GILLINGHAM manager Mark Stimson added former Southend United captain Kevin Maher to his squad on Friday as he looks to experience to get his side out of relegation trouble.

The 31-year-old skippered the Shrimpers to back-to-back promotions before suffering relegation from the Championship last season.

He joins on a loan deal until the end of the season, but could be rewarded with a permanent deal if he impresses.

Maher began his career as an apprentice at Tottenham, but after failing to win a place in the first team he moved to Roots Hall in 1998. He played alongside Stimson to begin with and went on to make more than 400 appearances for the Essex club.

Despite possessing a wealth of midfielders in his squad, Stimson was clear why he wanted Maher.

He said: "I think when someone of his experience becomes available you don't want to miss out because [midfield] is a key area. If you have someone in there with a steady head, who shows composure and knows how to win games it is vastly important."

The transfer follows Stimson's capture of Danny Cullip, also 31, on a similar deal and the Gills boss admitted he felt he needed to add more leadership to the squad.

He said: "We have a goalkeeper [Simon Royce] who is experienced but he is not out there on the field and you do sometimes need a few leaders or a few older heads to lead us on the pitch and those two are perfect examples of that."

His last appearance was on New Year's Day.

CHARLTON Athletic chief executive Peter Varney will step down this summer after more than a decade at the helm.

Varney has overseen day-to-day running of the Addicks since October 1997, but is leaving the club due to personal reasons.

The news came just days before a meeting of Charlton plc shareholders that will see former Kent businessman Derek Chappell step up to become plc chairman, while current incumbent Richard Murray moves across to become chairman of the football club.

Murray paid tribute to Varney, saying: "He is without doubt the most impressive individual I have worked with throughout my business career."

"The development of The Valley, the significant new levels of investment he has attracted to the club, and the introduction of the Charlton Community Trust are the most impressive of his many achievements."

Charlton have already begun looking for a replacement, although Varney will remain in his post until the end of June.

Rower in oar of Cambridge call-up

SELECTED: Henry Pelly (above) is one of two rowers from Kent to make the Cambridge Boat Race team

TWO rowers from Kent have the chance to compete in one of the world's oldest annual sporting events after being selected to represent Cambridge in the 2008 Boat Race.

The prestigious race between Oxford and Cambridge Universities began in 1829 and has been contested every year outside the World Wars since 1856.

Bromley-born Henry Pelly and Ashford's Tom Ransley were called up to the Cambridge squad last week and will tackle the famous four-mile course down the River Thames.

Pelly was thrilled to make the eight-man rowing crew for his first Boat Race, but believes the experience he has gained in competing in international regattas will help him cope with nerves.

He told KoS: "I am happy to be selected, to compete in the boat race has always been one of my main goals and to achieve this is fantastic."

"I have rowed at a high level before with the under-23 Great Britain squad, but never in front of such a big audience. I am not too scared by that, in fact I am more excited."

Hundreds of thousands of spectators line the famous course between Putney Bridge and Mortlake on March 29, with millions watching on television.

The 24-year-old only began in the sport in his last year of secondary school and spent his gap year rowing for Dover Rowing Club. He was also a pupil at the same Eton College as four-time Olympic champion Matthew Pinsent.

Ransley, 22, rowed for Britain in last year's European Championships and has competed at the famous Henley regatta for the last five years.

THE venues selected across the county as potential training camps ahead of the London Olympics could feel the benefits for years, according to a regional 2012 chief.

The London Organising Committee (LOCOG) has unveiled a list of 630 sites across the UK which will go into a guide distributed to all other Olympic associations this summer. The 201 national bodies will use the document to decide where their athletes prepare before the Games.

Kent performed exceptionally well, with 36 facilities included in the guide, outperforming both Scotland (28 sites) and Wales (31). And rather than just being used for a brief period before the Olympics, those venues used by national teams could become internationally renowned centres used year-in year-out.

Padraig Herlihy, South East co-ordinator for the 2012 Games, believes the potential for raising the profile of Kent's sport facilities is huge.

He told KoS: "Some teams will want to visit in the years before the Olympics to acclimatise to the weather and the culture so they are comfortable for 2012."

"We have also got the prospect of being used as training camps after the Olympics. In 2014 Glasgow has the Commonwealth Games. Scottish sites are being used for the London Olympics, so who is to say teams would not use sites in the South to prepare beforehand?"

Benefits

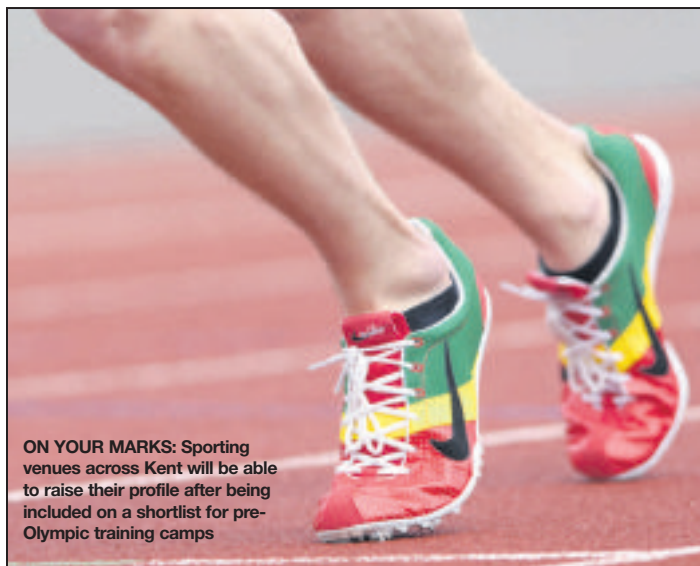

"Lanzarote has built an industry by being a warm-weather training site for athletes, so sites in Kent could be used at other times of the year."

One club which already has an international reputation is the Jumpers Rebound Trampoline Centre in Gillingham. Top-class athletes from around the world regularly train at the facilities and the centre is one of the few venues in the guide certain to be used before London 2012.

National teams wanting to use the facilities will pay a fee to use the venue, but club chairman Martin Laws believes the long-term benefits far outweigh any financial gain.

He said: "It is about the coaches working together and having foreign visitors which leaves a longer legacy than any money we receive."

"It is having the younger performers see how techniques vary across the world and

ON YOUR MARKS: Sporting venues across Kent will be able to raise their profile after being included on a shortlist for pre-Olympic training camps watching the cutting edge of world class training."

Kent as a whole is certain to benefit economically from hosting the training camps.

In a ground-breaking measure, LOCOG will award every country using the UK to prepare for the games £25,000 to spend on training camps. This will double if Paralympic teams also come to train.

If all Kent's facilities included in the guide were used by both Olympic and Paralympic teams, the grants would mean a minimum overall investment of £1.8million. The money would be spent on anything from hiring sport facilities to accommodation and transport.

The countries most likely to come to the area are expected to be those with medium-sized teams. However, Herlihy believes Kent County Council's pioneering consortia approach to target teams with specific needs will prove successful.

He said: "They spotted a trend where countries might have quite an eclectic mix of sports. The smaller countries might only need athletics, boxing and judo. I think it does make them more likely to get teams booking the facilities."

Herlihy also believes having teams staying in the area will provide a unique chance to build lasting bonds between the host towns and visiting countries.

He said: "It is not just about sport, there are cultural and business opportunities."

"If Canterbury get Venezuela they could establish links between each other. They could build school and community links and I would hope if there wasn't a British athlete in a final then local people would cheer on the Venezuelan."

Although 36 venues in the county were accepted, 12 did not make it past the application process.

Maidstone Hockey Club were among the excluded, but chairman Roger Daniels believes just being in contention will help raise its profile.

He said: "We were delighted to get the recognition to get through the first stage. It is very nice to be able to say to backers we were good enough to make a bid and be considered."

"Hosting a training camp would have been a bonus but we are hoping there will be a real fervour around London 2012 and we want to be riding that wave of interest."
